

Ch. 9 Study Guide: Industrial Revolutions, 1750-1900

Objectives

Global Context for Industrialization

1. Explain the significance of the Industrial Revolution for human history.
 - a. The Industrial Revolution is significant for human history because of the change in mindset and production that came from it.
 - i. The change in production caused by the Industrial Revolution was seen explicitly in the way that machines were used to handle the creation of everyday items. For example clothes produced in England began to all be made through cotton mills which allowed for faster production, more profits to investors, and economic stimulation in England.
 - ii. The change in mindset from the Industrial Revolution deeply affected the political and economic spheres. For example due to the high production of mills, workers were put in extreme conditions and were forced to work long and grueling hours. This allowed for a new philosophy called Communism to be created by Karl Marx. This philosophy was so revolutionary that it permanently altered the course of history through the birth of communist nations.
2. Explain the difference between the first (ca. 1780-1850) and second (ca. 1870-1914) Industrial Revolutions.
 - a. The difference between the first and second Industrial Revolutions was what was produced. While in the first Industrial Revolution cotton mills, coal/iron mines, and factories were created, the second revolution was more focused on chemicals, pesticides, and mechanical improvements.

Britain ("The First Industrial Society")

1. Explain the factors that caused the Industrial Revolution to begin in Britain in the 1780s.
 - a. The main factor that prompted the Industrial Revolution in Britain was the competition between small European countries. Due to this competition Britain made laws that essentially allied itself with the merchant class allowing for monopolies and laws that gave special privileges to merchants
2. Explain the following terms, and how they are related to each other and to the Industrial Revolution: classical liberalism, free trade, laissez faire, free markets, industrial capitalism.
 - a. classical liberalism - A political branch which advocates for free markets and free trade with an emphasis on individual autonomy.
 - b. free trade & free markets - a term describing the freedom that people have to spend/save money as they choose to.
 - c. laissez faire - A policy or attitude of letting things take their own course, essentially allowing for markets to operate freely with little or no interference from state or local powers.
 - d. industrial capitalism - The rapid development of factory production with intricate divisions of labor.
