

Paragraph on Corruption

Corruption undermines fairness and trust in society. It occurs when people abuse their power for personal gain. This dishonest behavior affects various sectors, including politics, business, and law enforcement. Bribery, embezzlement, and nepotism are common forms of corruption. It hampers economic growth and development by diverting resources away from essential services. Corruption erodes public confidence in institutions and fosters inequality. Combatting corruption requires transparency, accountability, and strict enforcement of laws. It's a collective responsibility to promote integrity and uphold ethical standards to build a more just and equitable society.
