

Why Junk Food Should Be Banned In Schools

In order for students to perform at the best level they possibly can in their schooling they need to be eating the right foods rather than junk food. The short and long term effects of junk food is something that cannot be ignored. If you knew them the chances of you even coming close would be little. "Eating a poor quality diet high in junk food is linked to a higher risk of obesity, depression, digestive issues, heart disease and stroke, type 2 diabetes, cancer, and an early death, I'm pretty sure that's something we all wouldn't want. And as you might expect, frequency matters when it comes to the impact of junk food on your health".

First and foremost, selling junk food in schools is something that should be prohibited because, an estimated 28% of children and adolescents in Australia are overweight or obese. Obesity is a big problem and something that shouldn't be taken lightly. Once you start to engage in excessive unhealthy eating habits you become overweight, once you become overweight you start to become lazy and inactive. You wouldn't want to see students overweight and continuously eating food that is bad for both their mental and physical health. Laziness and being inactive is a habit we wouldn't want to see students have, rather we want to see them excel by having a healthy diet and getting enough exercise as this would make them feel both physically and mentally good. There is nothing good about being obese and overweight it only brings negative things to the individual.

The second reason for why it should be banned is because, People with depression or anxiety may experience weight gain. Depression and anxiety can both be associated with overeating, especially
