UTI An infection that only affects the bladder can be uncomfortable and painful A UTI however can spread to the kidneys and cause major health issues The most common cause of UTIs is when bacteria enter the urinary tract via the urethra and start to proliferate in the bladder It is the purpose of the urinary system to keep bacteria out But sometimes the defences fall apart If that occurs germs may establish a foothold and develop into a serious infection in the urinary system The bladder and urethra are the most commonly affected areas by UTIs which mostly affect women When bacteria or other microorganisms get past the body's defences in the urinary system urinary tract infections UTIs result Although they can create discomfort and urinary issues medicine and natural therapies can frequently make them go away Furthermore obstructions and issues with kidney function can raise someone's likelihood of getting a challenging UTI Overall ladies are more likely than males to get a UTI with 10% of females getting one per year and 40-60% of females getting an infection at least once in their lifetime Because their urethras are shorter than those of men females are more vulnerable because bacteria can enter the bladder more easily Guys and females share similar side effects Notwithstanding 2021 examination proposes that guys had a higher possibility encountering side effects that influence the lower urinary tract
