- Abstract

5 Between the 1960s and 1980s, the average value of a house in the United States rose from $10,000 to $100,000. This increase was due to a combination of factors, including inflation, population growth, and the desire for larger homes.

- 1 The most common cause of stress for those newly involved in the construction industry is a lack of knowledge of the construction process. This can be overcome by attending a construction course or by seeking out a mentor who can provide guidance and support.
- 2 One of the most common causes of stress in the construction industry is the pressure to complete a project on time and within budget. This can be managed by creating a realistic schedule and budget, and by communicating regularly with the client and the team.
- 3 Another common cause of stress is the physical demands of the job. This can be managed by taking regular breaks, staying hydrated, and wearing appropriate safety gear.
- 4 Finally, the uncertainty of the construction industry can be a source of stress. This can be managed by staying up-to-date on industry trends and by building a strong network of contacts.
