

Although Stalin's role in creating the Soviet State was minor his role in establishing the U.S.S.R. as a nation was immense. Through a totalitarian approach Stalin controlled all aspects of life. He controlled the output of artists, collectivised the economy so it was state controlled, created a cult of personality around himself and used the Great Terror as a way to ensure he would have no opposition. It was in this way that Stalin remodelled the Soviet state successfully into a stronger nation where the state influenced all aspects of the economy, society and politics.

Stalin only played a minor role in the creation of the Soviet state. During Lenin's rule he was not seen as a man of action and generally concerned himself with administrative work. His first major work for Russia was the foundation of the official newspaper, Pravda. He then continued to assist implementing the Nomenklatura System where the General Secretary held a large amount of power by being the only person to be a part of the Politburo, Orgburo and Secretariat. Stalin recognised the control he could exercise on all parts of the party and became General Secretary in April 1922. Yet still Stalin did not make great changes to the State until he had complete control in 1928. Therefore, Stalin's role in the creation of the Soviet state was minor but after gaining control of the party he steered the U.S.S.R. into a new direction.

This new direction was Stalinism. Stalinism is a version of communist theory based on the policies of Joseph Stalin. The formation of this began in 1913 with Stalin's work concerning nationalities in a future communist state 'Marxism and the National Question', where he proclaimed the nation as a 'capitalist phenomenon'. Stalin believed in the theory of an aggravated class struggle he used this as a basis to suppress political opponents as victims of this struggle. In many ways it was synonymous with totalitarianism.

A prime concern of Stalinism was to establish Russia as a stable world power. According to Stalin, 'Other countries are 50 years ahead of Russia. We must make good this distance in 10 years'. The survival of Russia relied on the transformation into a modern society. All policies of Stalin and therefore the influence it had on life stemmed from this belief. The life of Russians changed dramatically due to the introduction of collectivisation and industrialisation, the use of a cultural revolution and the development of a climate of fear.

Collectivisation, introduced in 1928, was the policy that entailed all work must be to the benefit of the state. Primarily in agriculture, this led to amalgamation of private plots of lands, owned by the Kulak class, into government farms. This class of land owning peasants was eliminated in a process known as Dekulakisation. Individuals were indoctrinated to put the needs of the collective, state, over that of their own. This changed the culture of Russian society as bettering the state became a common goal of many. For example, the state procured grain from rural areas as it was needed in the cities to support industrialisation. Overall, this led to an increase in efficiency, which allowed people to move to cities yet agricultural production fell in the early 1930's by almost 40%. This policy, along the NKVD, the name of the Cheka from 1923, eliminated those with capitalist beliefs, the Kulaks. Although this supported industrialisation, there was also widespread famine in rural areas.

The second phase of this plan aimed to industrialise the country and create a command economy under the control of Gosplan, the state planning committee. Due to Stalin's belief in socialism in one country, the U.S.S.R. had to be self-sufficient. This was done through the implementation of Five Year Plans whose goals assisted the collective, not the individual. The First Five Year Plan, 1928-1932, focused on increasing efficiency of existing heavy industry. Although industrial output increased

Stalin Stephen Kotkin, 2015-10-13 In his biography of Stalin Kotkin rejects the inherited wisdom about Stalin's psychological makeup showing us instead how Stalin's near paranoia was fundamentally political and closely tracks the Bolshevik revolution's structural paranoia the predicament of a Communist regime in an overwhelmingly capitalist world surrounded and penetrated by enemies At the same time Kotkin posits the impossibility of understanding Stalin's momentous decisions outside of the context of the history of imperial Russia

The Russian Revolution and Civil War 1917-1921 Jonathan Smele, 2006-04-15 The Russian Revolution and Civil War in the years 1917 to 1921 is one of the most widely studied periods in history It is also somewhat inevitably one that has generated a huge flow of literature in the decades that have passed since the events themselves However until now historians of the revolution have had no dedicated bibliography of the period and little claim to bibliographical control over the literature The Russian Revolution and Civil War 1917-1921 offers for the first time a comprehensive bibliographical guide to this crucial and fascinating period of history The Bibliography focuses on the key years of 1917 to 1921 starting with the February Revolution of 1917 and concluding with the 10th Party Congress of March 1921 and covers all the key events of the intervening years As such it identifies these crucial years as something more than simply the creation of a communist state

The Catacazy Affair and the Uneasy Path of Russian-American Relations Lee A. Farrow, 2021-09-09 Constantin Catacazy whipped up scandal in Washington after his appointment there as Russian Ambassador in 1869 ignoring diplomatic protocol and defying social mores By 1871 President Grant and his Cabinet requested that he be recalled But the timing of this request overlapped with the visit of the tsar's son to the USA a celebrated diplomatic event symbolising the friendship and good will between the two nations Consequently Catacazy was allowed to travel with the tsar's son but only as a persona non grata This tense resolution led many to worry about the future of the Russian American friendship With a keen sense of the human interest Lee A Farrow demonstrates that this affair was one of the earliest significant complications in the relationship between Russia and the USA Using a lively micro historical approach and fresh materials such as the letters of Catacazy and of Secretary of State Hamilton Fish from archives in the USA UK and Russia Farrow explores 19th century politics and diplomacy and the pre suffrage power of women in the political arena through an investigation of the Washington wives reactions to the controversial figure of Olga Catacazy The result is a cutting edge analysis of this pivotal episode in modern history

Beyond the Color Line and the Iron Curtain Kate A. Baldwin, 2002-10-17 Re examines the relations between African Americans and the Soviet Union from a more transnational perspective and shows how these relations were crucial in the formation of Black modernism

The Bolsheviks and the Russian Empire Liliana Riga, 2012-11-12 This comparative historical sociology of the Bolshevik revolutionaries offers a reinterpretation of political radicalization in the last years of the Russian Empire Finding that two thirds of the Bolshevik leadership were ethnic minorities Ukrainians Latvians Georgians Jews and others this book examines the shared experiences of assimilation and socioethnic exclusion that underlay their class universalism It suggests that imperial policies toward the Empire's diversity radicalized class and ethnicity as intersectional experiences creating an assimilated but excluded elite lower class Russians and middle class minorities universalized particular exclusions as they disproportionately sustained the economic and political burdens of maintaining the multiethnic Russian Empire The Bolsheviks social identities and routes to revolutionary radicalism show especially how a class universalist politics was appealing to those seeking secularism in response to religious tensions a universalist politics where ethnic and geopolitical insecurities were exclusionary and a tolerant imperial imaginary where Russification and illiberal repressions were most keenly felt
