

The Submission Guidelines for every Comic and Manga Publisher in the Universe

March 17, 2009 By Jason Thibault 164 Comments

LAST UPDATED: SEPTEMBER 30, 2010

Late in 2008 I was curious about which comic companies were still accepting submissions. In an act of pure masochism your friends at Optimum Wound visited the websites of every known comics publisher over the past two months. Back in 2004 Tom Spurgeon over at The Comics Reporter had posted an insanely useful resource page on getting published in comics. It's still highly recommended reading. It's been over four years and we wanted to see what had changed. To our surprise we found over 50 places that you could still send your writing and art samples.

We compiled this list from several issues of Diamond Previews and a couple of publisher directories.

A few points of order:

1. Be sure to click through the links and review each set of guidelines thoroughly to see if you should be sending samples there and if you've put your package together correctly. Some places accept emailed submissions while others are strictly by mail. I've attempted to provide a brief description for each company.

2. Due to the economic downturn some of the publishers below may stop accepting submissions and worse, close their doors for good. We'll try to stay on top of it. Note: Marvel and several others have already stopped accepting open submissions.

3. I probably missed a number of publishers and will be happy to add them to the list if contacted.

4. Although a lot of major book publishers have thrown their hat into the graphic novel publishing game you would require an agent to even get reviewed. And here is an amazing list of Literary Agents Who Represent Graphic Novels.

5. Writers are going to have a tougher go of it as usual. The majority of companies out there are looking for artists but there are still a significant amount of them that will accept writing proposals.

6. I decided to break this down into several categories. The BIG 4 comic publishers, the independents (further broken down into 3 categories: arthouse, genre and misc.), manga publishers, book companies, adult category and finally magazines.

7. DO YOUR RESEARCH before deciding to submit to a publisher. Seek them out in Google, check out comic forums. Are they a reputable publishing house? Would your book or style fit in with their's.
