The diagram shows a circuit with a voltage source on the left, represented by a red circle with a '+' sign at the top and a '-' sign at the bottom. Two wires extend from the source: a red wire from the positive terminal and a black wire from the negative terminal. The red wire loops around the top of a black rectangular component, which has two red circular terminals on its top surface. The black wire loops around the bottom of the same component, which has two black circular terminals on its bottom surface. The red and black wires then connect to the terminals of the component, forming a closed loop.

A schematic diagram showing three motor units connected in parallel. Each unit consists of a motor and a switch. The positive terminal of a power source is connected to the positive terminal of each switch. The negative terminal of the power source is connected to the negative terminal of each motor. This configuration allows each motor to be controlled independently by its own switch.
