A Feature-Centric View of Information Retrieval Donald Metzler, 2011-09-18 Commercial Web search engines such as Google Yahoo and Bing are used every day by millions of people across the globe With their ever growing refinement and usage it has become increasingly difficult for academic researchers to keep up with the collection sizes and other critical research issues related to Web search which has created a divide between the information retrieval research being done within academia and industry Such large collections pose a new set of challenges for information retrieval researchers In this work Metzler describes highly effective information retrieval models for both smaller classical data sets and larger Web collections In a shift away from heuristic hand tuned ranking functions and complex probabilistic models he presents feature based retrieval models The Markov random field model he details goes beyond the traditional yet ill suited bag of words assumption in two ways First the model can easily exploit various types of dependencies that exist between query terms eliminating the term independence assumption that often accompanies bag of words models Second arbitrary textual or non textual features can be used within the model As he shows combining term dependencies and arbitrary features results in a very robust powerful retrieval model In addition he describes several extensions such as an automatic feature selection algorithm and a query expansion framework The resulting model and extensions provide a flexible framework for highly effective retrieval across a wide range of tasks and data sets A Feature Centric View of Information Retrieval provides graduate students as well as academic and industrial researchers in the fields of information retrieval and Web search with a modern perspective on information retrieval modeling and Web searches South Korea at the Crossroads Scott A. Snyder, 2018-01-02 Against the backdrop of China's mounting influence and North Korea's growing nuclear capability and expanding missile arsenal South Korea faces a set of strategic choices that will shape its economic prospects and national security In South Korea at the Crossroads Scott A Snyder examines the trajectory of fifty years of South Korean foreign policy and offers predictions and a prescription for the future Pairing a historical perspective with a shrewd understanding of today's political landscape Snyder contends that South Korea's best strategy remains investing in a robust alliance with the United States Snyder begins with South Korea's effort in the 1960s to offset the risk of abandonment by the United States during the Vietnam War and the subsequent crisis in the alliance during the 1970s A series of shifts in South Korean foreign relations followed the Nordpolitik engagement with the Soviet Union and China at the end of the Cold War Kim Dae Jung's Sunshine Policy designed to bring North Korea into the international community trustpolitik which sought to foster diplomacy with North Korea and Japan and changes in South Korea's relationship with the United States Despite its rise as a leader in international financial development and climate change forums South Korea will likely still require the commitment of the United States to guarantee its security Although China is a tempting option Snyder argues that only the United States is both credible and capable in this role South Korea remains vulnerable relative to other regional powers in northeast Asia

despite its rising profile as a middle power and it must balance the contradiction of desirable autonomy and necessary alliance Congressional Record United States.
