Summary Of Leitch Report:

David Currie, Will Peters, 2016-05-12 First published in 1980 this book collects 17 lectures presented at the annual conference of the Association of University Teachers of Economics covering a wide range of issues and debates. They include new theoretical points, criticisms of existing theory, the reporting of empirical studies and their implications, and refinements of methodological techniques. Among the topics covered are government deficits and capital accumulation, macroeconomic issues of management policy and foreign trade, empirical studies of foreign exchange markets and supply and demand of factors of production, public sector and welfare economics, risk and uncertainty, and monopoly competition and markets.

Post-16 skills Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Education and Skills Committee, 2007-08-02 This inquiry into post-16 skills considers the following areas: the underpinning principles of the Government's Skills Strategy; the recommendations of the Leitch report; supply side issues; the experiences of those looking for skills training; the development of a so-called demand-led system for skills. Although the Committee commends the Government for its focus on skills, it has a number of concerns about the direction of some of the policy. These include questions about whether increasing the stock of qualifications is an accurate indicator of the stock of skills and that more attention needs to be paid to the employer's requirement for bite-sized learning. The current infrastructure for delivering skills is overly complicated and much needs to be done to eliminate overlaps and reduce inefficiency. The Government has set store on a demand-led system and the Train to Gain programme. However, there are worries about the quality of some of the brokerage and it could be that sometimes they only act as an extra layer of bureaucracy. Sector Skills Councils are another demand-led mechanism but they face problems in representing the views of diverse sectors and of small and medium-sized enterprises. However, one of the key issues is raising rather than simply responding to demand from employers and individuals. Parliamentary Papers Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons, 1926 Summary Report of Mines Branch Investigations ... Canada. Mines Branch, 1912 Summary Report - Geological Survey Department Geological Survey of Canada, 1915 Re-skilling for Recovery Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Innovation, Universities, Science and Skills Committee, 2009 In its report examining the impact of Lord Leitch's 2006 review of skills, Prosperity for all in the global economy: world class skills

2006 ISBN 9780118404860 the Innovation Universities Science and Skills Committee says the Government must place re skilling at the heart of its skills policy in order to meet the challenges of recession and redundancies Re skilling rather than up skilling should be the priority as redundancies force people to move to other sectors Government focus should be on tackling skills shortages and approaching skills as part of wider national economic development planning The Committee recommends that more flexibility is built into training support to ensure skills development meets current and future demand The abolition of the Learning and Skills Council and the creation of a new Skills Funding Agency for post 19 training could add to existing confusion about training and skills provision The system must be simplified and the Government should quickly provide clarity on the roles of the different organisations and ensure the system can be understood by its users It is essential that the Government s Train to Gain programme is made flexible enough to deal with rapid adjustments for unemployed people who need quick re training Aspects of Train to Gain are currently failing to satisfy different demands and unless the programme is radically re focused one of Leitch s central reform planks will be lost The sustainability of co funded higher education courses is a concern and the Committee warns that the current economic downturn may affect the willingness of employers to meet the required level of investment

Institutional Barriers to Sustainable Transport Carey Curtis,Nicholas Low,2016-06-03 In a world seeking to tackle global environmental problems such as climate change the importance of local and national institutional change to deal most effectively with these issues is critical This book presents an investigation of the institutional barriers preventing the development of a new vision for urban transport compatible with these realities and in those terms sustainable Through an examination of transport planning in Australia the book challenges conventional wisdom by showing through original research how car dependence is as much an institutional as a technical phenomenon The authors case studies in three metropolitan cities show how transport policy has become institutionally fixated on a path dominated by private road based transport and how policy systems become encrusted around investment to accommodate private cars erecting an impenetrable barrier against more sustainable mobility and accessibility solutions Representing a new approach to understanding transport policy this book brings sophisticated political institutional analysis to what has traditionally been the domain of engineering and technology The authors connect the empirical content to this theory and the issue of sustainability making the findings applicable to most cities of the developed world and to fields beyond transport planning A strategy and program of action is outlined to take advantage of changing public perceptions and aimed at creating a new vision for urban transport

Meeting the Challenges of Change in Postgraduate Education Trevor Kerry,2010-06-24 This text takes a radical look at the nature of adult learning in the postgraduate context and at the implications of this for universities and their courses While over recent decades schools have had to undergo major re assessments about how learning is developed into curriculum how learning is delivered to students and how that learning is assessed universities have remained very largely detached from these pedagogical andragogical issues However the circumstances of higher education provision have changed There is also real pressure now from vocationalism Meeting the Challenges of Change in Postgraduate Education places these movements in both a UK and a wider context examines the nature of learning and teaching in postgraduate education and opens up the debate for rethinking university provision The book examines concepts such as integration as ways of retaining the higher order skills of a university education over against narrower technicist approaches and suggest a continuum of provision but one in which the learner takes centre stage
