

6. Read. Choose the correct answer.

According to a recent survey by AC Nielsen, more than 627 million people—one-tenth of the world's population—have shopped online. Among the 21,000 people from North America, Europe, Latin America, the Asia Pacific region, and South Africa who were surveyed, the Germans and the British turned out to be the world's most frequent online shoppers. In the month before the survey, Germans made an average of seven purchases, Britons six. In general, European countries had the highest average purchases, followed by Canada and Asian Pacific countries, with an average of five. U.S. online shoppers made four purchases on average. Latin American shoppers made the fewest purchases, an average of three.

1. ☐ A majority of the world's population has shopped online.
☐ A third of the world's population has shopped online.
☐ Most of the world's population hasn't shopped online.
2. ☐ 21,000 Germans and Britons had shopped online in the month before the survey.
☐ 21,000 people had shopped online in the month before the survey.
☐ 21,000 people were questioned about their online shopping habits.
3. ☐ Canadian shoppers make more online purchases than U.S. shoppers.
☐ People from Asian Pacific countries are the least frequent online shoppers.
☐ British people make the most online purchases.
4. ☐ Canadians and people in Asian Pacific countries make about the same number of online purchases each month.
☐ North Americans make twice as many online purchases each month as Latin Americans.
☐ Europeans make twice as many online purchases each month as Canadians.

7. Choose the best summary for each paragraph.

Many people like the ads they see when they are online. They like being given new information. They see ads as a way of learning about what is available for their lives. After all, technology is moving so fast, it's hard to keep up. Also, since many ads are personalized based on people's Internet activity, people find the ads convenient. For some, looking at online ads is like window shopping.

Other people really hate online ads. Pop-up ads are the worst, of course. There are no two ways about it. They get on my nerves. But many people go further. They don't want to be forced to see any ads at all when they are on social networks or reading online magazines. They say that it is wrong to make the Internet commercial. These people can't stand it when there are so many ads that they slow down the loading of a page.

I think there are points on both sides. Personally, I don't appreciate pop-ups, but I think other ads are the price we pay for good content. Many really important websites need to be supported by advertising money. Print magazines have ads, why shouldn't an online magazine? If I see an ad while I'm reading an article, I usually ignore it. But sometimes it will lead me to a good online store where I can browse. I do wish that there were fewer online ads, but I don't mind living with some.

Paragraph 1

According to the author, many people think online ads are useful.

Many people like the ads they see when they are online.

I agree with the author that technology is moving fast.

Paragraph 2

The author points out that other people really enjoy online ads.

I think online ads are really bad.

The author explains that there are people who are against online ads.

Paragraph 3

The author states that online ads can be either bad or good.

In the author's opinion, online magazines should have ads just like print magazines.

I think there are points on both sides.
