

Visual Vocabulary

There are so many ways to visualise data - how do we know which one to pick? Click on a category below to decide which data relationship is most important in your story, then look at the different types of charts within the category to form some initial ideas about what might work best. This list is not meant to be exhaustive, nor a wizard, but is a useful starting point for making informative and meaningful data visualisations.

Click any section below to view the chart's

Deviation

Emphasise variations (+/-) from a fixed reference point. Typically the reference point is zero but it can also be a target or a long-term average. Can also be used to show sentiment (positive/neutral/negative).

Correlation

Show the relationship between two or more variables. Be mindful that, unless you tell them otherwise, many readers will assume the relationships you show them to be causal (i.e., one causes the other).

Ranking

Use where an item's position in an ordered list is more important than its absolute or relative value. Don't be afraid to highlight the points of interest.

Distribution

Show values in a dataset and how often they occur. The shape (or "skew") of a distribution can be a memorable way of highlighting the lack of uniformity or equality in the data.

Change over Time

Give emphasis to changing trends. These can be short (intra-day) movements or extended series traversing decades or centuries. Choosing the correct time period is important to provide suitable context for the reader.

Part-to-Whole

Show how a single entity can be broken-down into its component elements. If the reader's interest is solely in the size of the components, consider a magnitude-type chart instead.

Magnitude

Show size comparisons. These can be relative (just being able to see larger/smaller) or absolute (need to see fine differences). Usually these show a "counted" number (for example, barrels, dollars or people) rather than a calculated rate or per cent.

Spatial

Used only when precise locations or geographical patterns in data are more important to the reader than anything else.

Flow

Show the reader volumes or intensity of movement between two or more states or conditions. These might be logical sequences or geographical locations.
