

Activity 1: Case Assignment on Characteristic Traits

Instructions: Read, think, and discuss the case below.

Background

- 1. Characteristic traits develop or are learned through biological factors.
- 2. Some characteristic traits are learned very early and automatically through experience.
- 3. Although all traits are genetically influenced, they may require different environmental conditions for development, when & how much? (What traits are rare?)
- 4. How do the two systems interact? Control with what intensity or how late growth?

Biologist David Reardon investigated how the genetic factors that determine whether a child develops a characteristic trait are influenced by genetic factors, like heredity. Reardon found that all the children of a particular family had a certain trait, such as a "C" shape. The trait appeared in the children because of the inheritance of a certain trait from the parents. At the same time,

1. Case Study
