Introduction to Applied Mathematics for Environmental Science David F. Parkhurst, 2007-12-06 For many years first as a student and later as a teacher I have observed graduate students in ecology and other environmental sciences who had been required as undergraduates to take calculus courses Those courses have often emphasized how to prove theorems about the beautiful logical structure of calculus but have neglected applications Most of the time the students have come out of such courses with little or no appreciation of how to apply calculus in their own work Based on these observations I developed a course designed in part to re-teach calculus as an everyday tool in ecology and other environmental sciences I emphasized derivations working with story problems sometimes quite complex ones in that course and now in this book The present textbook has developed out of my notes for that course Its basic purpose is to describe various types of mathematical structures and how they can be applied in environmental science Thus linear and non linear algebraic equations derivatives and integrals and ordinary and partial differential equations are the basic kinds of structures or types of mathematical models discussed For each the discussion follows a pattern something like this 1 An example of the type of structure as applied to environmental science is given 2 Next a description of the structure is presented 3 Usually this is followed by other examples of how the structure arises in environmental science 4 The analytic methods of solving and learning from the structure are discussed
