Postcolonial Gateways and Walls Daria Tunca, Janet Wilson, 2016-11-07 Metaphors are ubiquitously used in the humanities to bring the tangibility of the concrete world to the elaboration of abstract thought Drawing on this cognitive function of metaphors this collection of essays focuses on the evocative figures of the gateway and the wall to reflect on the state of postcolonial studies Some chapters on such topics as maze making in Canada and the Berlin Wall in the writings of New Zealand authors foreground the modes of articulation between literal borders and emotional dis connections while others examine how artefacts ranging from personal letters to clothes may be conceptualized as metaphorical gateways and walls that lead or conversely regulate access to specific forms of cultural expression and knowledge Following this line of metaphorical thought postcolonial studies itself may be said to function as either barrier or pathway to further modes of enquiry This much is suggested by two complementary sets of contributions on the one hand those that contend that the canonical centre periphery paradigm and the related writing back model have prevented scholars from recognizing the depth and magnitude of cross cultural influences between civilizations on the other those that argue that the scope of traditional postcolonial models may be fruitfully widened to include territories such as post imperial Turkey a geographical and cultural gateway between East and West that features in several of the essays included in this collection

Ultimately all of the contributions testify to the fact that postcolonial studies is a field whose borders must be constantly redrawn and whose paradigms need to be continually reshaped and rebuilt to remain relevant in the contemporary world in other words the collection's varied approaches suggest that the discipline itself is permanently under construction Readers are therefore invited to perform a critical inspection of the postcolonial construction site

Turkey and the Politics of National Identity Shane Brennan, Marc Herzog, 2014-09-19 In the first decade of the twenty first century Turkey experienced an extraordinary set of transformations In 2001 in the midst of financial difficulties the country was under IMF stewardship yet it has recently emerged as one of the fastest growing economies in the world And on the international stage Turkey has managed to enhance its position from being a backseat NATO member and outside candidate for EU membership to being an influential regional power determining and developing its own individual foreign policy Shane Brennan and Marc Herzog explore how these and other changes have shaped the way people in Turkey perceive themselves and how the country's self image shapes its actions In the modern age the sovereign nation state still continues to be one of the basic building blocks of social or political identity The Turkish Republic founded in 1923 is a good example In weaving together and selecting certain elements of memory myth tradition and symbols the narratives of national identity in Turkey have been to a large extent socially constructed This volume offers analysis of the ways in which these narratives have been created maintained and negotiated and how current economic and political interests have been incorporated into the construction of a modern identity External forces such as those of cultural and economic globalisation have also been influential agents in this process
