Among the several genetic and drug-induced animal models of ADHD available, the inbred Spontaneously Hypertensive Rats (SHR) strain has often been considered the most validated model, since they 'naturally' display the main ADHD symptomatology, including hyperactivity, impulsivity and poorly sustained attention (Russell, 2007, Sagvolden et al., 2005). Although SHR's hyperactivity has been questioned – and almost exclusively appears in response to novelty and in comparison to Wistar-Kyoto rats (Ferguson and Cada, 2003) – the cognitive deficits of SHR have been extensively reported in several behavioral paradigms by our group (Pires et al., 2009, Prediger et al., 2005a, Prediger et al., 2005b) and others (De Bruin et al., 2003, Kantak et al., 2008, Nakamura-Palacios et al., 1996, Sagvolden and Xu, 2008). For this reason, the SHR strain is of interest in the study of neurobiological changes involved in ADHD and for testing of new therapeutic interventions for cognitive dysfunctions (Takahashi et al., 2008). Although different pharmacological approaches have been successfully tested in SHR, and therefore suggested as alternatives for ADHD therapy, relatively little is known about the involvement of environmental factors in ADHD-like symptomatology presented by this rat strain and to what extent 'protective' non-pharmacological factors may be considered as preventive strategies for such behavioral abnormalities.

One potential non-pharmacological approach to neurological disorders is environmental enrichment, which induces beneficial effects against cognitive dysfunctions (Kempermann et al., 1997, van Praag et al., 2000). In a broad sense, environmental enrichment is an experimental paradigm in animals which supposedly parallel physical, social and intellectual activity of humans. These include encouragements to perform physical

The book has been produced to provide students with the basic information needed to understand the theological and religious research process from the idea stage to the production and submission of a dissertation. It is expected that the work will satisfy the needs of theological and religious studies students who must plan a research project and carry it out to completion to qualify for a degree through research.

The International Student's Guide to Writing a Research Paper Janine Carlock, Maeve Eberhardt, Jaime Horst, Peter Kolenich, 2017-06-13 The International Student's Guide to Writing a Research Paper is a reference text for undergraduate students and those in ESL or bridge courses who are writing a research paper for the first time. This book is partly an update of Writing a Research Paper by Lionel Menasche 1998 and partly a companion to The ESL Writer's Handbook. Each section of the book includes a discrete task called a Building Block which requires students to apply the skills learned toward the development of their own paper. This step by step approach allows students to construct knowledge as they become more familiar with the process making writing a research paper a less intimidating task. Special features This guide uses simple direct language for those for whom writing a research paper is new. Most example writing is from international students in an ESL program or first year writing class including two sample papers one in APA and one in MLA. A section on responding to instructor feedback to provide students with the tools to read and understand comments and use them to improve the first draft. A subsection dedicated to constructing clear and cohesive paragraphs and sentences The guide includes citation and style examples in MLA 8th edition
