Mapping Human Sensory-Motor Skills for Manipulation onto the Design and Control of Robots Matteo Bianchi,Gionata Salviotti,2019-03-25 Humans are endowed with extraordinary sensory motor capabilities that enable a successful interaction with and exploration of the environment as is the case of human manipulation Understanding and modeling these capabilities represents an important topic not only for neuroscience but also for robotics in a mutual inspiration both to inform the design and control of artificial systems and at the same time to increase knowledge on the biological side Within this context synergies i e goal directed actions that constrain multi DOFs of the human body and can be defined at the kinematic muscular neural level have gained increasing attention as a general simplified approach to shape the development of simple and effective artificial devices The execution of such purposeful sensory motor primitives on the biological side leverages on the interplay of the sensory motor control at central and peripheral level and the interaction of the human body with the external world This interaction is particularly important considering the new concept of robotic soft manipulation i e soft adaptable yet robust robotic hands that can deform with the external environment to multiply their grasping and manipulation capabilities Under this regard a preeminent role is reserved to touch being that skin is our primary organ to shape our knowledge of the external world and hence to modify it in interaction with the efferent parts This Research Topic reports results on the mutual inspiration between neuroscience and robotics and on how it is possible to translate neuroscientific findings on human manipulation into engineering guidelines for simplified systems able to take full advantage from the interaction and hence exploitation of environmental constraints for task accomplishment and knowledge acquisition

Marine Ecosystem Assessment for the Southern Ocean: Meeting the Challenge for Conserving Earth Ecosystems in the Long Term Monica M. C. Muelbert, 2024-12-24

National and international agencies need assessments of change in ecosystems and their drivers in order to sustain natural systems to maintain the delivery of services and to meet the challenge for conserving Earth ecosystems in the long term In marine systems change may arise directly from human activities e g fisheries indirectly from local or global activities cascading effects through food webs from fisheries or changing environments from climate change and or ocean acidification or from naturally varying processes A particular challenge for managers is to identify how dangerous future climate change will be for ecosystems and their services and whether mitigation or adaptation may be needed in advance in order to achieve the conservation requirements For regions of international attention particularly those that have the attention of many management or policy oriented bodies a standardized process is needed to harmonize the scientific information on the status and trends in ecosystems used by the different bodies That process also needs to ensure the information is available in a timely manner For example assessments of change in habitats species and or food webs in the Southern Ocean are currently compiled separately for at least ten different international organizations or processes A Marine Ecosystem Assessment for the Southern Ocean MEASO aims to harmonize that information for policy makers This assessment began with an international conference in April 2018 <http://www.measo2018.aq> where it was agreed to undertake the first MEASO over 2018-2019 with the view to provide the outcomes to relevant bodies such as the Scientific Committee for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources soon after
