Calculating Enclosures

For optimal performance, your subwoofer should be enclosed in a properly designed enclosure. The enclosure should be made of a rigid material, such as MDF or plywood, and should be sealed airtight. The enclosure should be designed to handle the power and frequency response of the subwoofer.

For more information on calculating enclosures, please visit our website at www.fsound.com. Our website contains a wealth of information on car audio systems, including detailed instructions on how to calculate the volume of an enclosure.

Calculating Enclosure Volume
The volume of an enclosure is calculated by multiplying the length, width, and height of the enclosure. The volume should be expressed in cubic feet (Cu Ft). The volume of the enclosure should be at least 1.5 times the volume of the subwoofer. For example, if the subwoofer has a volume of 1.0 Cu Ft, the enclosure should have a volume of at least 1.5 Cu Ft.

Calculating Enclosure Port Length
The port length of an enclosure is calculated by multiplying the port diameter by the port frequency. The port length should be expressed in inches. For example, if the port diameter is 4 inches and the port frequency is 44 Hz, the port length should be 176 inches.

Wiring

Please take every precaution to wire your dvc subwoofers for the correct impedance.
