MacKenzie,2012-09-06 During the Korean War nearly a thousand British servicemen along with a handful of British civilians were captured by North Korean and Red Chinese forces In various camps in the vicinity of Pyongyang and villages along the Yalu River these men found themselves subjected to a prolonged effort by the enemy to undermine their allegiance to the Crown and enlist them in various propaganda campaigns directed against the UN war effort British Prisoners of the korean War is the first academic study to examine in detail exactly what happened to the major groups of British military and civilian prisoners held in different locations at various junctures between 1950 and 1953 It explores the extent to which factors such as exposure to the actions of the North Koreans as against the Red Chinese evolving physical conditions enemy re education efforts communist attempts at blackmail British attitudes towards the Americans and personal background and leadership qualities among captives themselves influenced the willingness and ability of the British prisoners to collaborate or resist Thanks to the availability of hitherto classified or underutilized source materials it is now possible to test the common popular assumption based on official accounts and memoirs from the 1950s that in marked contrast to their American cousins British captives in the Korean War were pretty much immune to communist efforts at subverting their loyalty The results suggest that British attitudes and actions while in enemy hands were rather more nuanced and varied than previously assumed
