

Journal Prompts for a Borders & Belonging Unit

ELA Unit Planning Guide | Incorporate Facing History Journal Prompts

The following Facing History journal prompts are designed to support student reflection for a Borders & Belonging unit. To help students feel safe and empowered, it is important that they always know before they write if they will be sharing their ideas, and they should always have the choice to keep what they write in their journals private.

Prompts to Explore the Intersection of Borders and Belonging

- What is a border? What kinds of borders exist in the world? What purposes do borders serve?
- What forces keep borders in place? What forces can break borders down?
- How do we conceive of borders? In other words, how do we know they exist when many borders are invisible to the naked eye?
- How can borders, both real and imagined, shape individuals' sense of belonging?
- How can we cultivate empathy for individuals and groups on the other side of a border?

Prompts to Explore Individual and Group Behavior

- What are the visible and invisible borders that influence my sense of who I am and where I belong?
- How do your different identities intersect to shape who you are and your sense of belonging in some groups and your exclusion from others?
- Why and how do individuals and societies create "the Other"?
- What role do borders play in determining who is "in" and "out" of a neighborhood, community, or group?
