Suazo,2022-07-02 This book focuses on water disputes in New Zealand a country where such conflicts are assumed to be non existing Rarely are water disputes examined in areas where water resources abound and where the political framework that governs their access and use is strong Environmental security literature has devoted a significant amount of attention to the nexus between resource abundance and conflict Important research has assessed this relationship by focusing on non renewable resource wealth as a causal determinant of conflict but little is known about the conditions that influence the emergence and intensification of conflict in water abundant environments By most accounts New Zealand is one of the most water rich countries in the world Even though violent conflict over water does not normally materialize in New Zealand conflicts and incompatible claims motivated by water bottling the growth of some types of agriculture tourism and water treatment strategies continue to surface Little however is known about how and why these conflicts emerge and intensify in a country such as New Zealand To address this lacuna this project asks the following research question How and why does the commercialization of freshwater influence the emergence and intensification of hydropolitical conflict in New Zealand This study presents two central arguments First that the introduction of a commercial enterprise motivates the emergence of hydropolitical conflict intentionality if the enterprise is incompatible with the interests of local communities And second hydropolitical conflict risk intensifies in accordance with the level of trust that communities pose upon the approval and appeals process that supports a commercial operation To test

these arguments this study examines the effects of water bottling and water chlorination on the towns of Ashburton Canterbury and Glenorchy Otago by employing a tripartite analysis comprised first of a conflict intentionality and engagement assessment second of a comparative case study analysis and third of a conflict intentionality classification The data suggests that hydropolitical conflict risk is low when communities trust the approval and appeals process behind any given commercial operation Water based conflict risk however is likely to escalate when local communities lose trust in the above processes and the institutions that administer them
