addresses several issues that have been recurring themes and often topics of debate in the research and professional literature. The contributors discuss the impact of the five factor model on personality assessment, the issue of deception in personality assessment and various critical issues in the measurement of mood states. Other articles focus on the integration of the MMPI 2 and Rorschach and the process that clinicians should follow when applying scientific knowledge to clinical practice. Part III is primarily devoted to overviews of several statistical methods that are employed infrequently in personality assessment research but have great potential in contributing to the understanding of the complex data sets often encountered in the measurement and study of personality. These articles serve as both an introduction and a brief tutorial for personality researchers who are unfamiliar with the subject matter. They are valuable references that will form the basis for evaluating the appropriate use of these methods in published research in their areas of interest.
