Thielens, Christine Gaboriaud, 2016-11-22 C1q is the target recognition protein of the classical complement pathway and a major connecting link between innate and acquired immunity As a charge pattern recognition molecule of innate immunity C1q can engage a broad range of ligands derived from self non self and altered self via its heterotrimeric globular gC1q domain and thus trigger the classical complement pathway The trimeric gC1q signature domain has been identified in a variety of non complement proteins that can be grouped together as a C1q family C1q circulates in serum as part of the C1 complex in association with a catalytic tetrameric assembly of two homologous yet distinct serine proteases C1r and C1s Binding of C1q to appropriate targets leads to sequential activation of C1r and C1s the latter being able to cleave complement components C4 and C2 thereby triggering the complement cascade Activation of the classical pathway plays an important role in innate immune protection against pathogens and damaged elements from self However its involvement has been shown in various pathologies including ischemia reperfusion injury and hereditary angioedema Unexpected roles for the classical pathway have also been discovered recently linked to both physiological and pathological aspects of development including brain and cancer cells These new perspectives should arouse renewed interest in a search for specific inhibitors of the classical pathway In addition C1q has recently been shown to have a number of functions that are independent of the activation of the classical pathway This research topic is aimed at providing a state of the art overview of the classical pathway including but not restricted to emerging functions of C1q and of the C1 complex as well as pathological consequences of C1 activation or of the presence of anti C1q autoantibodies Contributions are included in the areas such as structural basis of C1q ligand recognition C1q family proteins inhibitors of the classical pathway identified in pathogens and improved derived inhibitors structural determinants of the substrate specificities of C1r and C1s elucidation of the architecture of C1 structural and functional homology of C1 with the initiating complexes of the lectin complement pathway and novel involvement of C1q in processes such as ageing cancer synaptic pruning and pregnancy

The State and the Art Richard Van Herzele, The role of private actors in policing has become a topic in both research and policy as police forces face budgetary and expertise related constraints These challenges are evident in art crime policing where a lack of prioritisation often means limited resources are allocated for a crime that requires significant expertise to tackle Cooperating with private actors has been mooted as a solution to this deficit but empirical research to support this suggestion is scarce This book helps fill this gap by examining the interaction between specialist art crime police units and private actors in Belgium the United Kingdom and France Its central questions are whether cooperation already exists in art crime policing and why or not It was found that while limits to police capacity are an important driver for private outreach several other factors also significantly affect cooperation This book is relevant for policy practice and research as it examines a hitherto less discussed topic which is nonetheless urgent as art crime shows little signs of abating
