Literary Reading, Cognition and Emotion Michael Burke, 2010-10-18 This work seeks to chart what happens in the embodied minds of engaged readers when they read literature Despite the recent stylistic linguistic and cognitive advances that have been made in text processing methodology and practice very little is known about this cultural cognitive process and especially about the role that emotion plays Burk s theoretical and empirical study focuses on three central issues the role emotions play in a core cognitive event like literary text processing the kinds of bottom up and top down inputs most prominently involved in the literary reading process and what might be happening in the minds and bodies of engaged readers when they experience intense or heightened emotions a phenomenon sometimes labelled reader epiphany This study postulates that there is a free flow of bottom up and top down affective cognitive inputs during the engaged act of literary reading and that reading does not necessarily begin or end when our eyes apprehend the words on the page Burke argues that the literary reading human mind might best be considered both figuratively and literally not as computational or mechanical but as oceanic

Critical Approaches to Teaching the High School Novel Crag Hill, Victor Malo-Juvera, 2018-10-25 This edited collection will turn a critical spotlight on the set of texts that has constituted the high school canon of literature for decades By employing a set of fresh vibrant critical lenses such as youth studies and disabilities studies that are often unfamiliar to advanced students and scholars of secondary English this book provides divergent approaches to traditional readings and pedagogical practices surrounding these familiar works By introducing and applying these interpretive frames to the field of secondary English education this book demonstrates that there is more to say about these texts ways to productively problematize them and to reconfigure how they may be read and used in the classroom
