

Have you ever had an emergency and needed to call someone right away? What do you do? You probably picked up your cell phone and called them immediately. Unless you were a kid, then you probably can't have a cell phone. I believe all kids should have a cell phone.

One reason I believe all kids should have a cell phone is "for safety." In a child has an emergency, the school is out early or it's raining and they can't walk home, a kid could call someone they have to help them get away.

Another reason I believe kids should have cell phones is because it helps someone find an eye on them. Phones have special apps that allow someone to track where the phone is, this means that if a person needs to know where their child is, they could look on the app and find them easily.

Finally, I believe kids should have cell phones because it allows them to learn it special ways, but only one kid learning how to use technology when they are "growing up" all the phone can do, but they also can use this phone to look up interesting facts that help them learning important things. I say this because most phones have features, which allows someone to do some simple research.

So, what do you do when you have an emergency? How often do you use your phone for something important? Shouldn't children have the same help? If you think the me, then your answer is yes, and this is what I believe kids should have cell phones.
