truly urbane architecture Vancouver, New Westminster & British Columbia Guide, 1913 Red Light Labour Elya M. Durisin, Emily van der Meulen, Chris Bruckert, 2018-09-01 In 2013 the Supreme Court ruled in Canada v Bedford that key prostitution laws were unconstitutional. The decision provoked wide interest but little new insight into sex work. Red Light Labour addresses Canada's new legal regime regulating sex work through the analysis of past and present policy approaches and consideration of how laws and those who uphold them have constructed controlled and criminalized sex workers, their clients and their workspaces. This groundbreaking collection also offers nuanced interpretations of commercial sexual labour that foreground the personal perspectives of workers and activists. The contributors highlight the struggle for civic and social inclusion by considering sex workers' advocacy tactics, successes and challenges. Red Light Labour promotes social and economic justice within a sex work as labour framework. This book is a timely intervention that showcases up-to-date legal policy and social analysis of sex work in Canada.

Dream City Lance Berelowitz, 2010-08-24 Located at the edge of a continent and at the corresponding edge of national public consciousness, Vancouver has developed in unique and unanticipated ways. It is now emerging as an experiment in contemporary city making with international interest in Vancouver as a model of post-industrial urbanism increasing exponentially. Lance Berelowitz explores the links between the city's seductive natural setting, its turbulent political history and changing civic values, and its planning and design culture. He also makes the startling case that Vancouver is to Canada's imagination what Los Angeles is to the American: a mythologized place of endless possibilities while being grounded in an altogether more limited set of socio-economic and environmental limitations. Dream City is richly illustrated with both historical and contemporary photographs of many significant buildings and public spaces, as well as specially commissioned maps that reveal the underlying patterns of growth and change of Canada's youngest metropolis.

Neuroarchitecture Frank Suurenbroek, Gideon Spanjar, 2023 How do we design the streets in large scale housing projects so that they retain a human scale In Western cities the need to house growing numbers of inhabitants frequently involves the introduction of ever taller tower blocks Although such urban projects are designed to maintain a human scale through attention to residential characteristics it remains unclear how users actually experience high rise and other forms of density at street level This book seeks to remedy that by exploring the new hybrid field of neuroarchitecture in which researchers use advanced technology to find out how the body responds to sensory stimuli from the built environment Neuroarchitecture introduces the discipline and systematically analyses examples of high density streets in Western cities like Amsterdam Toronto Manchester and Oslo What design solutions have been employed there And how are the places experienced visually What lessons we can draw about designing with a human scale Neuroarchitecture challenges conventional design guidelines and offers practical tips for enhancing the human scale of densely built environments

Vancouver's Chinatown Kay J. Anderson, 1991-11-04 Anderson charts the construction of Chinatown in the minds and streets of the white community of Vancouver over a hundred year period She shows that Chinatown from the negative stereotyping of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries to its current status as an ethnic neighbourhood has been stamped by changing European ideologies of race and the hegemonic policies those ideas have shaped The very existence of the district is the result of a regime of cultural domination that continues to exist today Anderson clearly rejects the concept of race as a means of distinguishing between groups of human beings She points out that because the implicit acceptance of public beliefs about race affects the types of questions asked by researchers the issue of the ontological status of race is as critical for commentators on society as it is for scientists studying human variation Anderson applies this fresh approach toward the concept of race to a critical examination of popular media and academic treatments of the Chinatown in Vancouver
