

Characterization and Character Types

2 pages | 340 words

Main character: The character that plays the biggest role in the plot of the story. Major character: Characters that play a big role in the story. Minor character: Characters that play a minor role in the story.

Round characters: Round characters are like real people. They have complex, multi-dimensional personalities. They are capable of growing and changing. They are often, but not always, major characters.

Flat characters: They have one-dimensional personalities. They represent or portray one particular characteristic. They are a type, e.g. the jealous lover, the fool or the grumpy, old man. They are often, but not always, minor characters.

Dynamic characters: They change as a result of their experiences.

Static characters: They do not learn from their experiences, and, thus, remain unchanged.

How does the author convey character? 1. Telling: The narrator tells how the character is, feels, thinks, etc. 2. Showing: The character reveals his or her personality through what the character says and does. 3. Setting: The author might use the setting (time and place) to say something about the character, e.g. about the character's emotions or feelings. 4. Comparison to other characters: It might be useful to analyse how the character relate to the other characters in the story, e.g. if there are characters that are in opposition to, or different from, the character in question. 5. Appearance: The character's clothes, looks and general appearance can often tell us something about the character's personality.

Questions to ask when analysing characters: 1. Is the character a main, major or minor character? 2. Is it a round or a flat character? 3. Is it a dynamic or a static character? 4. Does the author reveal the character through showing or telling, or both? 5. What does the way the character speaks reveal about his character? 6. What does his behaviour reveal about his character? 7. Is she similar or different from other characters in the story? How does she relate to the other characters? 8. Has the setting shaped the character's personality? 9. Does the setting reflect the character's mood or emotional state?

Characters and Characterization in Luke-Acts Frank Dicken, Julia Snyder, 2016-10-20 Like all skilful authors the composer of the biblical books of Luke and Acts understood that a good story requires more than a gripping plot a persuasive narrative also needs well portrayed plot enhancing characters This book brings together a set of new essays examining characters and characterization in those books from a variety of methodological perspectives The essays illustrate how narratological sociolinguistic reader response feminist redaction reception historical and comparative literature approaches can be fruitfully applied to the question of Luke's techniques of characterization. Theoretical and methodological discussions are complemented with case studies of specific Lukan characters. Together the essays reflect the understanding that while many of the literary techniques involved in characterization attest a certain universality, each writer also brings his or her own unique perspective and talent to the portrayal and use of characters, with the result that analysis of a writer's characters and style of characterization can enhance appreciation of that writer's work.

Landmark Essays on Rhetorical Criticism
Thomas W. Benson, 2020-08-18 This book is an anthology of landmark essays in rhetorical criticism. In historical usage a landmark marks a path or a boundary as a metaphor in social and intellectual history, landmark signifies some act or event that marks a significant achievement or turning point in the progress or decline of human effort. In the history of an academic discipline, the historically established senses of landmark are mixed together, jostling to set out and protect the turfmarkers of academic specialization, aligning footnotes to signify the beacons that have guided thought and against these conservative tendencies attempting to contribute fresh insights that tempt others along new trails. The editor has chosen essays for this collection that give some sense of the history of rhetorical criticism in this century, especially as it has been practiced in the discipline of speech communication. He also emphasizes materials that may illustrate where the discipline conceives itself to be going, how it has marked its boundaries, how it has established beacons to invite safety or warn us from the rocks, and how it has sought to preserve a tradition by subjecting it to constant revision and struggle. In the hope of providing some coherence, the scope of this collection is limited to rhetorical criticism as it has been practiced and understood within the discipline of speech communication in North America in this century.

The Harvard Advocate, 1888 Landmark Essays on American Public Address
Martin J. Medhurst, 2020-08-26 This volume traces the historical evolution of American academic thought concerning public address: what it is, how it ought to be studied, and what can be learned by engaging rhetorical texts in an analytical fashion. To begin, one must distinguish among three separate but interrelated uses of the term public address: as practice, theory, and criticism. The essays in this volume represent landmarks in the literal sense of that term: they are marks on the intellectual landscape that indicate where scholars and ideas have passed and in that passing left a mark for future generations. It is appropriate to revisit the landmarks that have set public address off as a field of study, and it allows readers to remember the struggles that have led to the current situation. Most of the authors of the following chapters are deceased, but their ideas live on, transformed, adapted, modified, rejected, and reborn. The scholarly dialectic continues. What constitutes a study in public address? how best to approach rhetorical texts? which analytical tools are required for the job? how best to balance text with context and what role ought theory to play in the conduct or outcome of critical inquiry? these questions live on. To answer them at all is to engender debate, and that is how it should be if the intellectual vitality of public address is to be maintained. The papers are a prolegomenon to such studies for they mark where scholars have been and point the way to where they still must go.

Aguirre, Benjamin Lempert, 2017-07-05 The racial prejudices of 1930s America were many and included a common presumption that African American art was unoriginal merely poorly copying white culture African American novelist anthropologist and essayist Zora Neale Hurston crushingly evaluated such assumptions in her 1934 essay Characteristics of Negro Expression While Hurston's approach and premises seem in many ways dated to modern readers the essay still shows an incisive mind carefully evaluating arguments and cutting them down to size African American art of the time did not Hurston influentially argued play by the same rules as white art so it could not meaningfully be discussed by white notions of aesthetic value Where white European tradition views art as something fixed Hurston saw African American art works as a distinctive form of mimicry reshaping and altering the original object until it became something new and novel In this way she contended African American creative expression is a process that generates its own form of originality turning borrowed material into something original and unique By carefully evaluating the relevance of previous arguments Hurston showed African American artistic expression in an entirely new light
