(Contemporary World Politics) (Chapter – 2) (Freedom)

(Class – XI)

Question 1:

What is meant by freedom? Is there a relationship between freedom for the individual and freedom for the nation?

Answer 1:

Freedom means to do all those things which do not harm others and, are necessary for a person's own development. There is a close relationship between the freedom for individual and for the nation because if a nation is free, every individual of it, will be free to increase their creativities and capabilities.

So, Freedom is:

- A situation that limits the constraints on individuals and allows them to expand their ability and reach their potential.
- Allows the full development of an individual's creativity, sensibility, capabilities and the autonomy to make choices.
- Permits the individuals to exercise their power of reason and judgment

Yes, there is a relationship between freedom for the individual and freedom for the nation:

- A free nation is the one which allows the full development of individual's talent and ability by making less restriction on individuals.
- An individual is said to be free only if s/he resides in a free nation.
- A nation is said to be free if it has freedom as one of its principles and only if it has provided this to its people.
- In this way, individual freedom and national freedom are closely linked to each other.

Question 2:

What is the difference between the negative and positive conception of liberty?

Answer 2:

Negative liberty		Positive liberty
1.	It defines and defends the area of an individual's life where no external authority is allowed to interfere.	1.	It defines the area of society where an individual is free with some constraints made by the society and the government.
2.	It is not concerned with the conditions of the society.	2.	It is concerned with the enabling conditions of the society.
3.	It is concerned with the idea of 'freedom from'.	3.	It is concerned with the idea of 'freedom to'.
4.	This area comes into personal domain of an individual.	4.	This area comes into social domain of an individual.
5.	More negative liberty leads to more freedom.	5.	More positive liberty checks excess of freedom to an individual, which could be an obstacle for the social stability.

Question 3:

What is meant by social constraints? Are constraints of any kind necessary for enjoying freedom?

Answer 3:

Political Science P. Payton, 2004-08-09 Trolling Before the Internet David Rudrum, 2024-11-14 Trolling began long before the internet This accessible history traces the ancestry of its textual and rhetorical strategies by looking at literature from ancient Greece to the 1980s Trolling is the most controversial genre of writing to have risen to prominence in the 21st century with far reaching consequences for its writers and readers alike But it is too often regarded as a technological problem confined to the internet This book takes a very different approach it regards trolling as a cultural problem with a long and venerable literary history Taking in the contrarianism of Lord Byron the wit of Oscar Wilde insult trading in Shakespeare Jonathan Swift s disaster trolling Martin Luther s dissemination of heresy through a public discussion forum the grotesquely misogynistic abuse hurled in Archilochus s poetry the taunting provocations of avant garde manifestos and not forgetting public humiliations in Beowulf David Rudrum demonstrates that trolls rhetorical shenanigans are neither new nor unvanquishable

Everything Is Obvious Duncan J. Watts,2011-03-29 By understanding how and when common sense fails we can improve our understanding of the present and better plan for the future Drawing on the latest scientific research along with a wealth of historical and contemporary examples Watts shows how common sense reasoning and history conspire to mislead us into believing that we understand more about the world of human behavior than we do and in turn why attempts to predict manage or manipulate social and economic systems so often go awry It seems obvious for example that people respond to incentives yet policy makers and managers alike frequently fail to anticipate how people will respond to the incentives they create Social trends often seem to be driven by certain influential people yet marketers have been unable to identify these influencers in advance

And although successful products or companies always seem in retrospect to have succeeded because of their unique qualities predicting the qualities of the next hit product or hot company is notoriously difficult even for experienced professionals Watts argument has important implications in politics business and marketing as well as in science and everyday life

Beyond open access: visions for open evaluation of scientific papers by post-publication peer review Nikolaus Kriegeskorte, Diana Deca, A scientific publication system needs to provide two basic services access and evaluation The traditional publication system restricts the access to papers by requiring payment and it restricts the evaluation of papers by relying on just 2-4 pre publication peer reviews and by keeping the reviews secret As a result the current system suffers from a lack of quality and transparency of the peer review evaluation process and the only immediately available indication of a new paper's quality is the prestige of the journal it appeared in Open access is now widely accepted as desirable and is slowly beginning to become a reality However the second essential element evaluation has received less attention Open evaluation an ongoing post publication process of transparent peer review and rating of papers promises to address the problems of the current system However it is unclear how exactly such a system should be designed The evaluation system steers the attention of the scientific community and thus the very course of science For better or worse the most visible papers determine the direction of each field and guide funding and public policy decisions Evaluation therefore is at the heart of the entire endeavor of science As the number of scientific publications explodes evaluation and selection will only gain importance A grand challenge of our time therefore is to design the future system by which we evaluate papers and decide which ones deserve broad attention So far scientists have left the design of the evaluation process to journals and publishing companies However the steering mechanism of science should be designed by scientists The cognitive computational and brain sciences are best prepared to take on this task which will involve social and psychological considerations software design and modeling of the network of scientific papers and their interrelationships This Research Topic in Frontiers in Computational Neuroscience collects visions for a future system of open evaluation Because critical arguments about the current system abound these papers will focus on constructive ideas and comprehensive designs for open evaluation systems Design decisions include Should the reviews and ratings be entirely transparent or should some aspects be kept secret Should other information such as paper downloads be included in the evaluation How can scientific objectivity be strengthened and political motivations weakened in the future system Should the system include signed and authenticated reviews and ratings Should the evaluation be an ongoing process such that promising papers are more deeply evaluated How can we bring science and statistics to the evaluation process e g should rating averages come with error bars How should the evaluative information about each paper e g peer ratings be combined to prioritize the literature Should different individuals and organizations be able to define their own evaluation formulae e g weighting ratings according to different criteria How can we efficiently transition toward the future system Ideally the future system will derive its authority from a scientific literature on community based open evaluation We hope that these papers will provide a starting point
