philosophes in Catholic morality in biological and medical knowledge in novels in periodicals and in the law. Alongside the appeals for social and intellectual emancipation advanced by the femmes savantes typical of the eighteenth century salons, a new conception pertaining to women's social role related to the affirmation of the bourgeoisie and of its model of the family took place. Codified in a more complex and organized way within the Rousseauian philosophy, this new conception spread in various cultural debates, gaining a real hegemony. Women were meant to be excluded from any public space devoid of cultural aspirations and only devoted to satisfying the needs of the family. The book adopts a multidisciplinary, interdisciplinary, and synthetic approach and at the same time highlights the roots of some fundamental ways of considering women that are still active in present-day society. It also addresses researchers in the history of philosophy, sociology, literature, and gender studies and readers with an interest in women's issues.

Lady's Realm, 1905      Middle English Paul Strohm, 2007-04-19

These original essays mean to provoke rather than reassure, to challenge rather than codify. Instead of summarizing existing knowledge after the fashion of the now ubiquitous literary companions, these essays aim at opening fresh discussion instead of emphasizing settled consensus; they direct their readers to areas of enlivened and unresolved debate. Although major authors such as Chaucer and Langland are richly represented, many little-known and neglected texts are considered as well. Analysis is devoted not only to self-sufficient works but to the general conditions of textual production and reception. Contributors to this collection include some recognized and admired names but also a good many newer faces, younger scholars whose groundbreaking research is just coming into full view and whose perspectives will influence the terms of literary discussion in the decades to come. Encouraged to speculate, they have addressed topics that unsettle previous categories of investigation. Each is oriented toward the emergent, the unfinalized, the yet to be done. Each essay stirs new questions and concludes with suggestions for further reading and investigation that will allow readers to extend their own research into the questions it has raised.
