Mathematical Knowledge in Teaching Tim Rowland, Kenneth Ruthven, 2011-01-06 The quality of primary and secondary school mathematics teaching is generally agreed to depend crucially on the subject related knowledge of the teacher. However, there is increasing recognition that effective teaching calls for distinctive forms of subject related knowledge and thinking. Thus, established ways of conceptualizing, developing, and assessing mathematical knowledge for teaching may be less than adequate. These are important issues for policy and practice because of longstanding difficulties in recruiting teachers who are confident and conventionally well qualified in mathematics and because of rising concern that teaching of the subject has not adapted sufficiently. The issues to be examined in Mathematical Knowledge in Teaching are of considerable significance in addressing global aspirations to raise standards of teaching and learning in mathematics by developing more effective approaches to characterizing, assessing, and developing mathematical knowledge for teaching.

Student Reactions to Learning with Technologies: Perceptions and Outcomes Moyle, Kathryn, Wijngaards, Guus, 2011-09-30 While the creation and adoption of new technologies has increased in recent years, the educational sector often limits technology use. Despite this, many researchers are convinced of the vital role that technologies can play in learning and teaching. Student Reactions to Learning with Technologies: Perceptions and Outcomes brings together recent research findings about the views and expectations of students when including technologies in their studies. The chapters in this book suggest that the use of technologies in teaching not only makes learning more interesting but also offers possibilities for variations in the learning processes. While this book does not offer irrevocable opinions and definitive views or insights, it provides a useful lens for viewing the world of students and providing insights into the possibilities for accessing and conducting similar research.
