Research Universities in Africa Nico Cloete,Ian Bunting,2018-11-09 From the early 2000s a new discourse emerged in Africa and the international donor community that higher education was important for development in Africa Within this zeitgeist of converging interests a range of agencies agreed that a different collaborative approach to linking higher education to development was necessary This led to the establishment of the Higher Education Research and Advocacy

Network in Africa Herana to concentrate on research and advocacy about the possible role and contribution of universities to development in Africa This book is the final publication to emerge from the Herana project The project has also published more than 100 articles chapters reports manuals and datasets and many presentations have been delivered to share insights gained from the work done by Herana Given its prolific dissemination it seems reasonable to ask whether this fourth and final publication will offer the reader anything new This book is certainly different from previous publications in several respects First it is the only book to include an analysis of eight African universities based on the full 15 years of empirical data collected by the project Second previous books and reports were published mid project This book has benefited from an extended gestation period allowing the authors and contributors to reflect on the project without the distractions associated with managing and participating in a large scale project For the first time some of those who have been involved in Herana since its inception have had the opportunity to at least make an attempt to see part of the wood for the trees Different does not necessarily mean new An emphasis on the newness of the data and perspectives presented in this book is important because it shows that it is more than a historical record of a donor funded project Rather each chapter in this book brings to a lesser or greater extent something new to our understanding of universities research and development in Africa

Contesting Hydropower in the Brazilian Amazon Ed Atkins,2020-11-15 In Contesting Hydropower in the Brazilian Amazon Ed Atkins focuses on how local national and international civil society groups have resisted the Belo Monte and S o Luiz do Tapaj s hydroelectric projects in Brazil In doing so Atkins explores how contemporary opposition to hydropower projects demonstrate a form of contested sustainability that highlights the need for sustainable energy transitions to take more into account than merely greenhouse gas emissions The assertion that society must look to successfully transition away from fossil fuels and towards sustainable energy sources often appears assured in contemporary environmental governance However what is less certain is who decides which forms of energy are deemed sustainable Contesting Hydropower in the Brazilian Amazon explores one process in which the sustainability of a green energy source is contested It focuses on how civil society actors have both challenged and reconfigured dominant pro dam assertions that present the hydropower schemes studied as renewable energy projects that contribute to sustainable development agendas The volume also examines in detail how anti dam actors act to render visible the political interests behind a project whilst at the same time linking the resistance movement to wider questions of contemporary environmental politics This interdisciplinary work will be of great interest to students and scholars of sustainable development sustainable energy transitions environmental justice environmental governance and development studies
