Brown, 2003-09-12 In recent years the escalating costs of health care have caused managed care programs to shift the delivery of pediatric psychological services away from specialized medical centers and into primary care and school settings One result has been a radical expansion of school psychology into issues of clinical intervention health promotion and the assessment of psychotropic medications School psychologists are now expected to either deliver or more likely to provide consultation regarding a wide variety of pediatric psychological services. Because this is a recent phenomenon, very few school-based psychologists or allied health practitioners, school counselors, and social workers have received training in pediatric psychology. The mission of this book is to provide them with a comprehensive and authoritative guide to their newly acquired responsibilities in such areas as psychotherapy, psychopharmacology, health promotion, and prevention of disease. This book explores how young children and new families are located in the consumer world of affluent societies. The author assesses the way in which the value of infants and monetary value in markets are realized together and examines how the meanings of childhood are enacted in the practices, narratives, and materialities of contemporary markets. These meanings formulate what is important in the care of young children, creating moralities that impact not only on new parents but also circumscribe the possibilities for monetary value creation. Three main understandings of early childhood: those of love, protection, and purification, and their interrelationships are covered and illustrated with examples including food, feeding tools, nappies, travel systems, and toys. The book concludes by re-examining the relationship between adulthood and the cultural value of young children and by discussing the implications of the ways markets address young children. Also examines the realities of older children in consumer culture. Childhood and Markets will be of interest to students and scholars of sociology, childhood studies, anthropology, cultural studies, media studies, business studies, and marketing.
