Personally, I couldn't agree more with the proposal that a university education should include internships or other forms of work experience.

To begin with, internships help to bridge the gap between theory and practical application. University courses involve a lot of reading and listening to lectures. Of course, they do occasionally involve active participation in tutorials and group projects as well (depending on the particular course and university), but in relation to actual work duties they can never be much more than a simulation. Despite being armed with a lot of knowledge and background theory, students are hardly prepared for the everyday reality of the jobs they will eventually seek out in their field of study. By way of example, during a post-graduate course in Tourism Marketing I completed, one of the assessable tasks was to go out and do actual field research for tourism companies and even design a potential website for one of them. This was a brilliant chance for me to put the things I had learned into real practice, and get a feel for how they operated in the real world of work.

In addition, work experience of some kind is really beneficial for future employment opportunities. While the first priority for a lot of jobs is a relevant degree or qualification, it can't be disputed that appropriate work experience plays a massive role in determining who gets new positions and who doesn't. An internship results in important work experience but also references that really enhance a student's future job applications. In addition, it is often the case that internships result in contacts that lead to job offers before or right after a student has completed his or her degree. A very good friend of mine did an internship for a tourism company during his degree. He was offered a part-time job with them while still studying, and he later went on to become an international marketing director with the very same company. This was all a direct result of his work experience with that company while he was a student.

Finally, actual experience in a field of work can help students determine if they are studying towards a goal they actually want or can do well. Students often select courses based on what they think will be good to do for a career later, even though they know very little about that kind of job in terms of day-to-day realities. Additionally, students are still relatively young when they make these course selections, and their preferences and skills can change. One of my best friends initially studied towards an IT teaching degree. During a few trainee teacher placements in actual schools, he realised he was more interested in the IT side of things than the actual teaching. In fact, he didn't really enjoy the teaching environment at all. Subsequently he switched degrees to focus more exclusively on IT, and now he is a senior manager in an IT firm. While for some students the internship process verifies their course selection and motivates them to pursue it with more vigor, in this case it was a valuable means of showing my friend that he was studying something that he wasn't cut out for. He was able to change his course before he invested any more of his time and money in a fruitless degree.

Based on these considerations, I think internships and work experience as a mandatory part of university coursework are a sterling idea.

Argument-Based Validation in Testing and Assessment Carol A. Chapelle,2020-01-10 Carol A Chapelle shows readers how to design validation research for tests of human capacities and performance Any test that is used to make decisions about people or programs should have undergone extensive research to demonstrate that the scores are actually appropriate for their intended purpose Argument Based Validation in Testing and Assessment is intended to help close the gap between theory and practice by introducing explaining and demonstrating how test developers can formulate the overall design for their validation research from an argument based perspective

Assessing the English Language Writing of Chinese Learners of English Liz Hamp-Lyons,Yan Jin,2022-05-24 This book focuses on the assessment of English language writing in China mainland the territories of Hong Kong and Macau and Taiwan The first part of the book describes how writing in English has been assessed in Chinese contexts in the past 25 years and how it continues to be assessed at present The second part of the book presents reports of work such as formative classroom based assessment feedback based or feedback led approaches learning oriented assessment portfolios as well as the important issue of teacher professional development in writing assessment This two part division relates to and reflects what has been happening in writing assessment internationally in the UK from the 1940s and in the US in the past 25 years The use of English for international business communication for international political negotiations and its rapidly increasing use as a medium of instruction in some subject areas has led to a rapid increase in the numbers of Chinese L1 speakers who are learning and being assessed in English. This is often done with an emphasis on reading and writing. The vast majority of assessments of English language writing are done through large scale direct testing that uses simple prompts, tasks and short writing samples. This book explores best practices in assessing the writing in English of native speakers of Chinese. Assessing the English Language Writing of Chinese Learners of English edited by long time experts Liz Hamp-Lyons and Yan Jin clearly demonstrates the authors' collective years of writing and teaching about writing assessment. The book's 13 chapters written by recognized experts in assessment of Chinese speakers learning English represent a wide array of important topics written in reader friendly language and offering evidence for pedagogical practices as well as high stakes testing of writing. Teachers, researchers, administrators of writing programs in China and test developers who seek counsel about this population need look no further than to add Assessing the English Language Writing of Chinese Learners of English to their reading list.

Diagnostic Writing Assessment Ute Knoch, 2009 The diagnostic assessment of writing is an important aspect of language testing which has often been neglected in the literature However it is an area which poses special challenges to practitioners both in the classroom and in large scale testing situations This book presents a study which set out to develop and validate a rating scale specifically designed for the diagnostic assessment of writing in an academic English setting The scale was developed by analysing a large number of writing performances produced by both native speakers of English and learners of English as an additional language The rating scale was then validated using both quantitative and qualitative methods The study showed that a detailed data based rating scale is more valid and more useful for diagnostic purposes than the more commonly used impressionistic rating scale TOEFL MAP Writing Basic (New TOEFL Edition) Jonathan S.
