Your success in TOEFL iBT writing lies in your preparation. Therefore, to prepare, you should practice making written responses to sample iBT independent writing tasks after which you can have someone else, preferably a TOEFL iBT writing specialist, evaluate your essay according to the official TOEFL iBT rubrics that Educational Testing Service (ETS) uses to evaluate your essay. Framed from the official ETS guidelines for the independent writing task of the TOEFL iBT, the following four questions about your essay should be answered by whomever you choose to evaluate your essay:

1. Did I answer all parts of the question?

Since many of the TOEFL iBT questions are multi-tasked, you should get feedback as to whether or not you have answered all parts of the writing assignment.

2. Is my essay well-organized?

In this case, the reviewer of your essay should check your thesis statement and topic sentences in the body paragraphs to make sure that they directly answer the question being asked. There should be adequate use of transition words and other types of signal words that show how your ideas are connected. Your reviewer should pay particular attention to the key junctures of your paper which can be especially troublesome: end of the first paragraph, beginning and end of each paragraph, and concluding paragraph. There should be a strong sense of unity in all these key junctures.
