For ages farmers have domesticated plant varieties while scientists have made nature through hybridization and other processes This give and take mediated through negotiations persuasion the marketplace and even coercion has resulted in what we call nature and has led to a homogenization of plant crops Yet homogenization has led to new problems genetic vulnerability and the lack of systems to maintain plant germplasm of varieties no longer grown in the fields This book addresses issues previously viewed as primarily technical concerning the germplasm debate that is how what and where to store the range of genetic materials necessary to reproduce plants By examining Brazil Chile France and the United States the authors show how different cultures respond to the decline in genetic diversity The findings show that the quest for uniformity in foods agriculture and environment eventually threatens everyone The politicization of this debate is inevitable because the destruction of human cultural diversity goes hand in hand with the destruction of plant varietal diversity The authors agree that responses to the controversies must involve food security relinking of food with agriculture and the environment revaluing traditional knowledge and rethinking development They stress that answers will be found not by experts acting unilaterally but through the democratization of scientific and technical exchange Lawrence Busch is professor of sociology at Michigan State University William B Lacy is director of the Cooperative Extension Service at Cornell University Jeffrey Burkhardt is a professor of agricultural economics at the Institute for Food and Agricultural Sciences at the University of Florida Douglas Hemken is a Ph D candidate in the Department of Rural Sociology at the University of Wisconsin Jubel Moraga Rojel is professor of sociology at the Universidade Austral del Chile Timothy Koponen is a Ph D candidate in sociology at Northwestern University and Josi de Souza Silva is with the Commission on Plant Genetic Resources at FAO in Rome Nation's Business ,1943 Country Life ,1912 Country Life in America ,1912
