

Active Tuning Antenna System

ATAS-25

Installation/Operating Instructions

Thank you for choosing Yaesu's exciting new ATAS-25 Active Tuning Antenna System. We hope and trust that you will enjoy many years of enjoyable field operation with the ATAS-25.

The ATAS-25 utilizes a manual tuning system which maximizes the radiating element to lowest SWR without the need for expensive, inconvenient remote band reconfiguring whip assemblies. The ATAS-25 allows dual frequency operation (on HF or 50 MHz) and either 144 or 430 MHz; if two transceivers are combined via a suitable diplexer (not supplied). The ATAS-25 is designed to mount directly onto a standard antenna input (not supplied; see Figure 1).

INSTALLATION

- Mount the ATAS-25 main body onto the tripod.
- Referring to Figure 2 and the following chart, connect the radiating elements according to the operating band; then screw the radiating element securely to the top of the coil assembly of the ATAS-25.

Operating Band	Radiating Elements
1 MHz	Three Elements
14 MHz	Three or Two Elements
21 MHz	Two Elements
28 MHz	Two or One Element(s) or Not Connected
50 MHz	Do Not Connect
144 MHz	Not Used
430 MHz	Not Used

NOTE: When the ATAS-25 is fitted with two radiating elements, use the top radiating element (the one with the rubber cap) and the bottom radiating element (the one with the threaded adapter at the bottom). When the ATAS-25 is fitted with only one radiating element, move the threaded adapter to the bottom of the element with the rubber cap, then screw that element onto the top of the coil assembly (Figure 3).

- Secure the VHF radial elements to the bottom of the ATAS-25 main body, using the supplied Allen wrench (Figure 4).
- Connect the supplied radial wires to the bottom of the ATAS-25 main body, then extend them outward from the antenna base (Figure 5).
- Connect the coaxial cable from the transceiver's HF antenna jack (see Figure 6). Typically, you can use the built-in SWR meter in the transceiver, but alternatively you may adjust the SWR using an "Antenna Analyzer" prior to connecting the coaxial cable to your transceiver.

If you operate the ATAS-25 along with the FT-417ND, we recommend that you set the transceiver's Menu-07 (SWR) to 10.00. For all bands (HF 50-144/430 MHz), to pass all bands HF power to the main antenna jack of the FT-417ND. Refer to the FT-417ND operating manual for details regarding the Menu selections.

After operation on the 144 and 430 MHz bands, in addition to HF 50-144 MHz using the FT-447-100-1000-4370-4970, you may wish to consider the purchase of a "Diplexer" (for the FT-100-1000-4370-4970) or "Triplexer" (for the FT-447) device in contact to the appropriate transceiver's antenna jack; the Diplexer or Triplexer will then automatically pass HF power from the band in use while routing the other one or two jacks. If you do not have a Diplexer or Triplexer, the coaxial cable connector from the ATAS-25 will have to be moved manually to the appropriate antenna jack when you wish to operate on VHF or UHF.

While operation is not guaranteed on the 10/18/24 MHz bands, please test freely experiment on these bands, as the SWR and good efficiency will be obtained in many instances.

Figure 6

Operation

- Tune the transceiver to the desired operating frequency.
- Referring to Figure 7, raise and lower the coil assembly while listening to the band noise, and seek the position of the coil assembly producing the most noise in the receiver. If a peak in the sensitivity is not obtained when the coil assembly is fully retracted to the "lowest" (shortest) position, remove one radiating element from the coil assembly and try again. You may have a total antenna length that is too long.
- Key the transmitter in the CW mode, and check the SWR meter reading.
- Referring to Figure 7 again, carefully turn the coil assembly to the right or to the left while the transceiver is receiving. After making an adjustment, stand away from the antenna and check the SWR again, and repeat (or reverse) the procedure until the best SWR is achieved. Do not touch the coil assembly during a transmitting session.
- If low SWR on an HF band cannot be satisfactorily obtained, connect (add) the supplied spare radial wire to the bottom of the ATAS-25 main body and extend it outward from the antenna base, then try the above procedures again.

Use of Caution Tape

If it is not possible to achieve a low SWR on the 144 MHz band, pass the supplied "Capacitor Tube" onto the VHF radial element, then slide the Capacitor Tube outward, starting at the innermost position, so as to obtain the best SWR. When the optimum position is identified, secure the Capacitor Tube to the radial element using the supplied Allen wrench.

CAUTIONS

- The ATAS-25 is designed for temporary field operation. We do not recommend that the ATAS-25 be used for permanent operation, as it does not include the weather-proofing needed for long term outdoor installation.
- The ATAS-25 is designed for a maximum power of 100 Watts (SSB/CW) or 50 Watts (JAMFM, 144 MHz, 430 MHz). Do not exceed this combined power input (if two transceivers are connected via a diplexer) when operating the ATAS-25.
- Do not connect (insert) the ATAS-25 to the antenna jack of the transceiver or antenna mount directly using a double male coaxial adapter plug. The ATAS-25 must be mounted onto a tripod or other similar item using the Carriers. Secure the ATAS-25 to the bottom of the ATAS-25 main body.
- Do not allow anyone to touch the radiating element during a transmitting session, due to the danger of burning of the skin caused by the high RF voltage present. It helps the accuracy of the SWR measurements if all people are standing at least 10 feet (3 m) away from the radiating element, always. To minimize inaccuracies due to mutual coupling to the human figure(s) in the vicinity.
- If erratic transceiver operation is observed, there may be common mode current flowing on the shield of the coaxial cable. Make an RF choke by cutting about eight turns of cable into a coil of diameter approximately 9" (roughly 150 mm) near the ATAS-25, taping the coils to hold them in place. If this does not eliminate the problem, reverse the cable ends, placing the coil near the transceiver. If additional cable is available, place a coil at both ends of the coaxial cable in different cases.
- Set up the tripod as low and level as possible, for maximum stability of the tripod/antenna assembly. SWR tends to be best with the base of the ATAS-25 near the ground, as well (Figure 1).
- Should the ATAS-25 get wet due to rain, wipe off the antenna's components using a dry cloth. Then completely dry the ATAS-25 overnight with the coil assembly fully extended.
- For SSB/CW CW operation on the 144/430 MHz bands, remember that the convention for polarization in most areas is horizontal, not vertical, so we recommend the ATAS-25 mostly for local FM work or voice bands.
- Make every effort to install the ATAS-25 away from areas where people might trip over the tripod legs, coaxial cable or counterpoise wires. We strongly recommend that the tripod legs be staked firmly to the ground, or the tripod and antenna be otherwise secured with guy ropes and stakes, to prevent the antenna from accidentally flapping over, so as to avoid injury to bystanders and/or damage to antenna components.
