

Assembling Instructions

In carrying a Rockwell Tester, it should be grasped only by its base, that is, by the cast iron pedestal, and never by any parts that are attached to that pedestal.

It should be gently handled. Preferably, take the tester and accessories to where they are to be used (which should be a clean bench in a clean location, free from vibration and free from grit) before starting to assemble the tester.

The following instructions should be carried out in the order listed. For detailed instructions, look up, in index, subject named in parentheses.

- A. Fasten crank handle to right side of tester.
- B. Fill the oil dash pot (see "Dash Pot" for adjustment).
- C. Hang weight pan and weights on lever (see "Selecting Load").
- D. Place spot anvil in elevating screw (see "Anvils").
- E. Put penetrator in plunger (see "Selecting Penetrator").
- F. Check the index lever adjustment (see "Index Lever Adjustment").
- G. Put our Eel-Skid Oil on the work elevating screw as the oil may have dried if the tester has been in the packing case or idle for a long time.
- H. Level your tester (approximately is sufficient) by placing the plane anvil in position on the elevating screw. On the anvil place a level and rotate it. The tester as built stands correctly on a level bench, so block up if bench is not level. Precision leveling unnecessary.

The tester is now ready for making a hardness test (See "Operating Instructions").
