Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of self-reported depression between men and women who had been exposed to violence during childhood and adulthood. Data from the National Longitudinal Study of Adolescent Health (N = 9,800) are used to examine the association between exposure to violence and self-reported depression among adolescents. Results indicate that exposure to violence during childhood and adulthood is associated with higher rates of self-reported depression. Furthermore, the association between exposure to violence and self-reported depression is stronger for women than for men.
