

ACS (American Chemical Society) Style Guidelines Quick Guide

This web guide is based on the second edition of The ACS Style Guide: A Manual for Authors and Editors (1997). For a more thorough discussion refer to The ACS Style Guide which is available at the Chemistry and Engineering Libraries (Call number QD8.5.A25 1997 Reference Section).

Citing References in the Body of a Paper

References in the body of a paper can be cited:

- By number (italics)
The synthesis of the compound has been described previously (1).
- By superscript
The synthesis of the compound has been described previously.¹
- By author name and date
The synthesis of the compound has been described previously (Johnson, 1902).

With numerical citations, references should be numbered sequentially. If a reference is repeated, do not give it another number; rather, use the original reference number.

With author name citations, use both names if a reference has two authors (Jones and Smith, 2002). If there are more than two authors, use the first name followed by et al. (Harris et al., 2001).

Creating a Bibliography

- Arrange the references in your bibliography based on the method used for in-text citations. If numerical citations were used, then arrange references at the end of the paper numerically. If author names were used, arrange alphabetically.
- All references end with a period.
- Do not leave blank lines between references.
- Journal article titles and book chapter titles are not essential, but they are considered desirable.
- If a book as a whole is used, pagination is not necessary.

Writing Effective Course Assignments Elia Shabani Mligo, 2017-05-11 Non-degree and undergraduate students are both inexperienced essay writers who need close guidance to become effective writers. One of the puzzles which they encounter at the college and university after reporting for studies is the course assignments offered to them by their lecturers which demand them to be critical thinkers and argumentative essay writers. In most colleges and universities lecturers provide to students broad questions to answer in the form of essays either in group or individual assignments. How should they turn the broad assignment questions provided to them by their lecturers into specific researchable topics for essays? How should they handle literature in order to obtain valuable information to answer the provided question? How should they construct an informed and convincing argument using the collected information as evidence? This book concerns these and other related questions. With its clear illustrations the book is designed to be a self-study guide and to offer solutions to many struggling students in colleges and universities. At the same time the book can be helpful for lecturers to instruct their students how to write effective course assignments in their respective courses.
