Mapping the connectome: Multi-level analysis of brain connectivity Trygve B. Leergaard, Continental Connections Hugo Anderson-Whymark, Duncan Garrow, Fraser Sturt, 2015-02-26 The prehistories of Britain and Ireland are inescapably entwined with continental European narratives The central aim here is to explore cross channel relationships throughout later prehistory investigating the archaeological links material social cultural between the areas we now call Britain and Ireland and continental Europe from the Mesolithic through to the end of the Iron Age Since the separation from the European mainland of Ireland c 16 000 BC and Britain c 6000 BC their island nature has been seen as central to many aspects of life within them helping to define their senses of identity and forming a crucial part of their neighbourly relationship with continental Europe and with each other However it is important to remember that the surrounding seaways have often served to connect as well as to separate these islands from the continent In approaching the subject of continental connections in the long term and by bringing a variety of different archaeological perspectives associated with different periods to bear on it this volume provides a new a new synthesis of the ebbs and flows of the cross channel relationship over the course of 15 000 years of later prehistory enabling fresh understandings and new insights to emerge about the intimately linked trajectories of change in both regions Trust and Trust-Making in Africa's Global Connections ,2025-04-14

Connections in the History of East-Central Europe Katja Castryck-Naumann,2021-10-25 Transregional connections play a fundamental role in the history of East Central Europe This volume explores this connectivity by showing how people from eastern and central parts of Europe have positioned themselves within global processes while in turn also shaping them The contributions examine different fields of action such as economy arts international regulations and law development aid and migration focusing on the period between the middle of the nineteenth century and the end of the Cold War The authors uncover spaces of interaction and emphasize that internal and external entanglements have established East Central Europe as a distinct region Understanding the connectedness of this subregion is stimulating for the historiography of East Central Europe as it is for the field of global history Wittgenstein: Connections and Controversies P. M. S Hacker,2001-11-22

Wittgenstein Connections and Controversies consists of thirteen thematically linked essays on different aspects of the philosophy of Wittgenstein by one of the leading commentators on his work After an opening overview of Wittgenstein s philosophy the following essays fall into two classes those that investigate connections between the philosophy of Wittgenstein and other philosophers and philosophical trends and those which enter into some of the controversies that over the last two decades have raged over the interpretation of one aspect or another of Wittgenstein's writings The connections that are explored include the relationship between Wittgenstein's philosophy and the humanistic and hermeneutic traditions in European philosophy Wittgenstein's response to Frazer's Golden Bough and the interpretation of ritual actions his attitude towards and criticisms of Frege both in the Tractatus and in the later philosophy the relationship between his ideas and those of members of the Vienna Circle on the matter of ostensive definition and a comparison of Carnap's conception of the elimination of metaphysics and of Strawson's rehabilitation of metaphysics with Wittgenstein's later criticisms of metaphysics The controversies into which Hacker enters include the Diamond Conant interpretation of the Tractatus which is shown to be inconsistent with the text of the Tractatus and with Wittgenstein's explanations of and comments on his book Winch's interpretation of the Tractatus conception of names Kripke's interpretation of Wittgenstein's discussion of following a rule which is demonstrated to be remote from Wittgenstein's intentions and Malcolm's defence of the idea that Wittgenstein claimed that mastery of a language logically requires that the language be shared with other speakers These far ranging essays several of them previously unpublished or difficult to find shed much light upon different aspects of Wittgenstein's thought and upon the controversies which it has stimulated

Sensory Processes at the Neuronal and Behavioral Levels G. V. Gersuni, 2013-09-11 Sensory Processes at the Neuronal and Behavioral Levels is a collection of papers dealing with problems of functional organization of the visual and auditory systems One paper points out that neurophysiological and psychophysiological research in vision can be combined The paper compares the cat's contrast stimulation by Hermann's grid that elicits neuronal responses of cells with concentric and simple fields as being similar to the subjective vision in man Another paper addresses the sources of information in the perception of visual spatial relations For example eye movements as the source of information about visual spatial relations are refuted The visual system already estimates accurately the spatial properties of an object before the onset of eye movements Another paper discusses certain concepts about the mechanisms of the auditory system One paper presents the results of an experiment involving some adult cats They were lightly anesthetized and their responses were recorded when the inferior colliculus or the left and right auditory cortex were stimulated electrically Another paper analyzes the mechanism used by insect in recognizing species specific songs This book is suitable for neurophysiologists neurochemists and researchers dealing with physiological acoustics and the psychophysics of the visual system

The Pragmatics of Perception and Cognition in MT Jeremiah 1:1-6:30 Elizabeth Hayes, 2008-12-10 Recent advances in cognitive linguistics provide new avenues for reading and interpreting Biblical Hebrew prophetic text This volume utilises a multi layered cognitive linguistics approach to explore Jeremiah 1 1 6 30 incorporating insights from cognitive grammar cognitive science and conceptual blending theory While the modern reader is separated from the originators of these texts by time space and culture this analysis rests on the theory that both the originators and the modern reader share common features of embodied experience This opens the way for utilising cognitive models conceptual metaphor and mental spaces theory when reading and interpreting ancient texts This volume provides an introduction to cognitive theory and method Initially short examples from Jeremiah 1 1 6 30 are used to introduce the theory and method This is followed by a detailed comparison of traditional and cognitive approaches to Biblical Hebrew grammar These insights are then applied to further examples taken from Jeremiah 1 1 6 30 in order to test and refine the approach These findings show that Jeremiah 1 1 1 3 establishes perspective for the text as a whole and that subsequent shifts in perspective may be tracked using aspects of mental spaces theory Much of the textual content yields to concepts derived from conceptual metaphor studies and from conceptual blending theory which are introduced and explained using examples taken from Jeremiah 1 1 6 30 The entire analysis demonstrates some of the strengths and weaknesses of using recent cognitive theories and methods for analysing and interpreting ancient texts While such theories and methods do not obviate the need for traditional interpretive methods they do provide a more nuanced understanding of the ancient text Immigrant

Transport Justice Karel Martens,2016-07-01 Transport Justice develops a new paradigm for transportation planning based on principles of justice Author Karel Martens starts from the observation that for the last fifty years the focus of transportation planning and policy has been on the performance of the transport system and ways to improve it without much attention being paid to the persons actually using or failing to use that transport system There are far reaching consequences of this approach with some enjoying the fruits of the improvements in the transport system while others have experienced a substantial deterioration in their situation The growing body of academic evidence on the resulting disparities in mobility and accessibility have been paralleled by increasingly vocal calls for policy changes to address the inequities that have developed over time Drawing on philosophies of social justice Transport Justice argues that governments have the fundamental duty of providing virtually every person with adequate transportation and thus of mitigating the social disparities that have been created over the past decades Critical reading for transport planners and students of transportation planning this book develops a new approach to transportation planning that takes people as its starting point and justice as its end
