The Antiquity And World Expansion Of Human Culture:

Global Life Systems Robert P. Clark, 2000 Humans did not begin as a global species we had to expand to become one And we could not have done so without other living organisms becoming global along with us Robert P Clark develops in this book a global life systems perspective that delineates how biological forces mutually reinforce one another and what their globalization has meant for both human society and the biosphere While he resists biological determinism Clark traces interconnected developments among population disease agriculture trade fuels and other life systems to more thoroughly explore and elucidate the globalization of human endeavors within an ever evolving context of nature and environment His lucid and richly documented book offers a fresh look at social evolution and a broader basis for understanding the contemporary context for global change EPA-600/5, 1974-02 University of Toronto Quarterly University of Toronto, 1895 The Biosphere and Noosphere Reader David Pitt, Paul R. Samson, 2012-10-02 The Reader is the first comprehensive history of the noosphere and biosphere Drawing on classical influences modern parallels and insights into the future the Reader traces the emergence of noosphere and biosphere concepts within the concept of environmental change Reproducing material from seminal works both past and present key ideas and writings of prominent thinkers are presented including Bergson Vernadsky Lovelock Russell Needham Huxley Medawar Toynbee and Boulding and extensive introductory pieces but the editors draw attention to common themes and competing ideas Focussing on issues of origins theories parallels and potential the discussions place issues in a broad context compare and contrast central concepts with those of the Gaia hypothesis sustainability and global change and examine the potential application of noospheric ideas to current debates about culture education and technology in such realms as the Internet space exploration and the emergence of super consciousness Literally the sphere of mind or intellect the noosphere is apart of the realm of the possible in human affairs where there is a conscious effort to tackle global issues The noosphere concept captures a number of key contemporary issues social evolution global ecology Gaia deep ecology and global environmental change contributing to ongoing debates concerning the implications of emerging technologies The SAGE Handbook of Environmental Change John A Matthews, 2012-01-31 The SAGE Handbook of Environmental Change is an extensive survey of the interdisciplinary science of environmental change including recent debates on climate change and the full range of other natural and anthropogenic changes affecting the Earth ocean atmosphere system in the past present and future It examines the historic importance present status and future prospects of the field over two volumes With more than 40 chapters the books situate the defining characteristics and key paradigms within a state of the art review of the field including its changing nature and diversity of approaches evidence base key theoretical arguments resonances with other disciplines and relationships between theory research and practice Opening with a detailed contextualizing essay by the editors the work is arranged into six parts Part One Approaches to Understanding Environmental Change Part Two Evidence of Environmental Change and the Geo

The Origins of Catholic Evolutionism, 1831-1950 Kenneth W. Kemp, 2025 The history of the Catholic Church's response to evolutionary biology has often been badly misrepresented as antagonistic In fact its response is better characterized as a long process of accommodation This work is a comprehensive introduction to the work of the Catholic scientists and theologians who worked out the details of that accommodation Few Catholics found the evolutionary origin of plant and animal species theologically objectionable None thought that evolutionary processes provided a sufficient account of the origin of the first human beings Catholics differed over whether those processes played a role in the origin of the first human body Catholic evolutionism began with the work of four nineteenth century scientists who might be called the pioneers of Catholic evolutionism Belgian geologist Jean Baptiste d Omalius d Halloy English anatomist George Mivart Italian anatomist Filippo De Filippi and French paleontologist Albert Gaudry The next generations of Catholic evolutionists writing in the period from about 1890 1940 included scientists Jesuit entomologists Erich Wasmann and Felix R schkamp as well as priests who focused more exclusively on the question of compatibility Dalmace Leroy John Zahm Henry de Dorlodot and Ernest Messenger Among the scientists might also be included French paleontologist Pierre Teilhard de Chardin who made some contributions to the general idea of the compatibility of evolutionary biology and Catholic theology but who eventually veered off in the direction of a comprehensive evolutionary theology of nature the details of which are beyond the scope of this book Catholic anti evolutionists made efforts to have the Church prohibit works of Catholic evolutionism that in their judgment gave evolutionary processes too great a role in the formation of the human body or that relied on problematic principles of hermeneutics Efforts on the former front were eventually blocked by Pope Pius XI The first magisterial statement on the question came however only in 1950 with Pope Pius XII's encyclical Humani generis which provisionally declared the orthodoxy of evolutionary accounts of the origin of the human body In addition to providing details about Catholic evolutionists and the magisterium the book also reviews the treatment of the new ideas in Catholic encyclopedias periodicals and textbooks Although written in the first instance as a work of scholarship the book was also written with attention to the needs of scientists priests and members of the general public who are interested in the question

Future through Cinematic Symbols Amar Singh, 2024-12-15 This book explores the making of futuristic memory through cinematic symbols relating to future relationships between humans and artificial intelligence AI Amar Singh examines how audiences are being prepared for possible future scenarios where they may find themselves entangled with intelligent objects through developing relationships with them and if so how they might react when confronted by an intelligent species Through this research Singh focuses on both the complications and flaws of science fiction depictions of AI as well as more abstract works that while not directly connected contribute to a better understanding of these emerging technologies Scholars of film media memory posthuman transhuman and cultural studies will find particular value in this book along with those focusing on literary and critical theory arts and aesthetics political sociology and advanced research in AI

An Ecology of Knowledges Micha Rahder, 2020-04-24 Guatemala's Maya Biosphere Reserve MBR the largest protected area in Central America is characterized by rampant violence social and ethnic inequality and rapid deforestation Faced with these threats local residents conservationists scientists and NGOs in the region work within what Micha Rahder calls an ecology of knowledges in which interventions on the MBR landscape are tied to differing and sometimes competing forms of knowing In this book Rahder examines how technoscience endemic violence and an embodied love of wild species and places shape conservation practices in Guatemala Rahder highlights how different forms of environmental knowledge emerge from encounters and relations between humans and nonhumans institutions and local actors and how situated ways of knowing impact conservation practices and natural places often in unexpected and unintended ways In so doing she opens up new ways of thinking about the complexities of environmental knowledge and conservation in the context of instability inequality and violence around the world

Many Layers of Ecocentrism Abhik Gupta, 2024-06-17 This book unveils the myriad streams of ecocentric thoughts that have been flowing through the human mind in indigenous communities in the wisdom of philosophers in the creative expressions of poets and writers sometimes latent but sometimes more explicit The strength of this book lies in the fact that it attempts to show that ecocentrism had not emerged suddenly as a distinct line of philosophical thought or found its place among the various normative approaches toward nature but the seeds of ecocentrism had always been running through human societies Thus this book not only emphasizes the unity of life but also reveals the inherent unity of all hues of ecocentrism The book adopts a multidisciplinary approach which is essential to dwell on a topic like ecocentrism which permeates the domains of disciplines as disparate as science philosophy religion normative ethics myths and folklore poetry and literature among others Despite this eclectic approach the book attempts to maintain continuity among the chapters and present these concepts in a simple form that will be easily accessible by readers from all conceivable backgrounds This book would be useful to the students researchers and faculty from the fields of ecology and environmental science philosophy sociology religious studies and literature It will also be an indispensable companion for all nature lovers activists and general readers interested in the emergence and evolution of environmental thoughts Earth and Moon Jan Pieter Bakker,1966 Hacking Education in a Digital Age Bryan Smith,Nicholas Ng-A-Fook,Linda Radford,Sarah Smitherman Pratt,2018-04-01 In this collection the authors put forth different philosophical conceptions of hacking education in response to the educational societal and technological demands of the 21st century Teacher Educators are encouraged to draw on the collection to rethink how hacking education can be understood simultaneously as a praxis informed by desires for malice as well as a creative site for us to reconsider the possibilities and limitations of teaching and learning in a digital era How do we hack beyond the limits of circumscribed experiences regulated subjective encounters with knowledge and the limits imposed by an ever constrained 21st century schooling system in the hopes of imagining better and more meaningful futures How do we foster ingenuity and learning as the end itself and not learning as economic imperative in a world where technology in part positions individuals as zombie like and as an economic end in itself Can we hack education in such a way that helps to mitigate the black hat hacking that increasingly lays ruin to individual lives government agencies and places of work How can we as educators facilitate the curricular and pedagogical processes of reclaiming the term hacking so as to remember and remind ourselves that hacking s humble roots are ultimately pedagogical in its very essence As a collection of theoretical and pedagogical pieces the chapters in the collection are of value to both scholars and practitioners who share the same passion and commitment to changing challenging and reimaging the script that all too often constrains and prescribes particular visions of education Those who seek to question the nature of teaching and learning and who seek to develop a richer theoretical vocabulary will benefit from the insightful and rich collection of essays presented in this collection In this regard the collection offers something for all who might wish to rethink the fundamental dynamics of education or as Morpheus asks of Neo in The Matrix bend the rules of conventional ways of knowing and being Earth and moon P. Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists ,1971-03 The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists is the premier public resource on scientific and technological developments that impact global security Founded by Manhattan Project Scientists the Bulletin s iconic Doomsday Clock stimulates solutions for a safer world Beginning Again David Ehrenfeld,1993 Early in this volume David Ehrenfeld describes what prophecy really is Referring to the biblical prophets he says they were not the holy fortunetellers that the word prophet has come to signify The business of prophecy is not simply foretelling the future rather it is describing the present with exceptional truthfulness and accuracy Once this is done then it can be seen that broad aspects of the future have suddenly become apparent The twentieth century is drawing to a chaotic close amidst portents of unprecedented change and upheaval The unravelling of societies and civilizations and the destruction of nature march together linked a fact whose enormous significance is often lost In Beginning Again David Ehrenfeld has undertaken the difficult task of describing the present clearly enough to reveal the future Out of his broad vision emerges a glimpse of a new millennium a vision at once frightening and comforting a scene of great devastation and great rebuilding Ehrenfeld ranges far and wide to present a coherent vision of our relationship with Nature its many aspects and implications as our century opens into the next millennium Whether he is writing about the problem of loyalty to organizations rights versus obligations our over managed society the vanishing of established knowledge the failure of experts the triumph of dandelions Dr Seuss Edward Teller or the future of farming he is always concerned with the intricate interaction between technology and nature As in his classic book The Arrogance of Humanism Ehrenfeld never loses sight of our fatal love affair with the fantasy of control We now have no choice he argues but to transform the dream of control of progress from one of overweening hubris love of consumption and the idiot s goal of perpetual growth to one based on the inventive imitation of nature with its honesty beauty resilience and durability Few American writers and even fewer scientists can describe these timeless transcendent qualities of nature so well In Places the opening chapter David Ehrenfeld tells about nightly vigils he spent alone on the moonlit beach of Tortuguero watching giant sea turtles emerging from the sea to lay their eggs in the black sand where they were born I could watch the perfect white spheres falling he writes Falling as they have fallen for a hundred million years with the same slow cadence always shielded from the rain or stars by the same massive bulk with the beaked head and the same large myopic eyes rimmed with crusts of sand washed out by tears Minutes and hours days and months dissolve into eons I am on an Oligocene beach an Eocene beach a Cretaceous beach the scene is the same It is night the turtles are coming back always back I hear a deep hiss of breath and catch a glint of wet shell as the continents slide and crash the oceans form and grow
