portable devices today reality television consistently takes us to cities such as New York Los Angeles and Boston to imagine the place of urbanity in American culture and society Jon Kraszewski offers the first extended account of this phenomenon as he makes the politics of urban space the center of his history and theory of reality television Kraszewski situates reality television in a larger economic transformation that started in the 1980s when America went from an industrial economy when cities were home to all classes to its post industrial economy as cities became key points in a web of global financing expelling all economic classes except the elite and the poor Reality television in the industrial era reworked social relationships based on class race and gender for liberatory purposes which resulted in an egalitarian ethos in the genre However reality television of the post industrial era attempts to convince viewers that cities still serve their interests even though most viewers find city life today economically untenable Each chapter uses a key theoretical concept from spatial theory such as power geometries diasporic nostalgia orientalism the imagination of social expulsions and the relationship between the country and the city to illuminate the way reality television engages this larger transformation of urban space in America
