World War I in Central and Eastern Europe Judith Devlin, John Paul Newman, Maria Falina, 2018-07-30 In the English language World War I has largely been analysed and understood through the lens of the Western Front This book addresses this imbalance by examining the war in Eastern and Central Europe The historiography of the war in the West has increasingly focused on the experience of ordinary soldiers and civilians the relationships between them and the impact of war at the time and subsequently This book takes up these themes and engaging with the approaches and conclusions of historians of the Western front examines wartime experiences and the memory of war in the East Analysing soldiers letters and diaries to discover the nature and impact of displacement and refugee status on memory this volume offers a basis for comparison between experiences in these two areas It also provides material for intra regional comparisons that are still missing from the current research Was the war in the East wholly other Were soldiers in this region as alienated as those in the West Did they see themselves as citizens and was there continuity between their pre war or civilian and military identities And if in the Eastern context these identities were fundamentally challenged was it the experience of war itself or its consequences in the shape of imprisonment and displacement and changing borders that mattered most How did soldiers and citizens in this region experience and react to the traumas and upheavals of war and with what consequences for the post war era In seeking to answer these questions and others this volume significantly adds to our understanding of World War I as experienced in Central and Eastern Europe

Home Front Julian M. Pleasants, 2018-10-03 At the outset of World War II North Carolina was one of the poorest states in the Union More than half of the land was rural Over one third of the farms had no electricity only one in eight had a telephone Illiteracy and a lack of education resulted in the highest rate of draft rejections of any state The citizens desperately wanted higher living standards and the war would soon awaken the Rip Van Winkle state to its fullest potential Home Front traces the evolution of the people customs traditions and attitudes arguing that World War II was the most significant event in the history of modern North Carolina Using oral history interviews newspaper accounts and other
