

Better focusing yields better pictures

The best camera, the best lens, optimum resolving power and utmost film quality still depend entirely on focusing precision.

Better focusing

See SINAR System Handbook, pages 60–62.

The camera position

See SINAR System Handbook, page 38.

Before starting to use any settings, set all movements to their zero position or engagement stops. (⊕ indicates the film plane location on the SINAR p and c).

SINAR p and c: Set the changeover levers for the swings and tilts to the same position on both standards (i.e. both at V or both at H).

Direct parallel displacement*

For short extensions; use wide angle bellows if necessary.

- Set up the camera in its basic position as shown.
- Centre the image with the rise and fall or lateral shifts.

Indirect parallel displacement*

For long extensions, bellows hood and for large shifts.

- Point the camera at the subject as shown.
- Bring the standards back to vertical with the coarse tilt (arrows).

* Verticals are reproduced parallel when the image standard (film plane) is parallel to the object. (Lens standard adjustments do not affect perspective, only sharpness distribution).
