Chemotherapy Frederick Becker,2012-12-06 The promise of chemotherapeutic control in the field of oncology seemed in the beginning no less bright than it had proven in the field of bacterial disease and therefore its failures were felt all the more Despite the serendipitous discoveries and inspired insights which tantalized us with striking remissions or the rare tumors which proved to be fully susceptible to a given agent in the main there has been either total failure or a painfully slow acquisition of an armamentarium against a limited number of malignancies To expect more however was the result of ignorance of the malignant cell for as has been described in the previous volumes of this series the exploitable differences between malignant and normal cells are few or undiscovered Differences is the numerator in this formula but exploitable is the operational term for although a great number of differences between normal and malignant cells have been described rarely are these differences observed in a vital metabolic pathway or a crucial macromolecular structure Essentially the basic metabolic pathways and nutritional requirements for normal and malignant cells are the same resulting in the fact that no chemotherapeutic agent can successfully inhibit a function in the majority of malignant cells without adversely affecting a similar function in the normal cell It was therefore naive to expect a magic bullet which would select the malignant cell and destroy it
