

- a) What are the individuals, groups or structures to which the central voices refer?
- b) Do they have specific characteristics of a particular profile?
- c) What importance do central voices ascribe to peripheral voices in their narratives?
- d) What kind of relationship do you establish with them?
- e) At what time and around what themes emerge in the text?

The expected result is to obtain a generic list of peripheral voices associated with useful information to address stage 2 and to guide stages 3, 4 and 5.

Stage 2. Design of the peripheral voices approach plan

The objective of this stage is to design the plan to access peripheral voices. The questions that may guide this stage are:

- a) What inclusion and exclusion criteria should peripheral voices meet?
- b) How many peripheral voices should be involved in the study to respond to the objectives?
- c) What are the themes that should be explored in the encounters with peripheral voices and how should they be explored/asked?
- d) What strategies will be developed during the study to approach peripheral voices?
- e) How will recruitment be carried out?

The expected result is to have a complete plan to address peripheral voices for implementation in stage 3.

Stage 3. Listening to peripheral voices

The objective of this stage is the implementation of the approach plan developed in stage 2. The expected result consists in obtaining a textual corpus of the discourses and narratives of peripheral voices. This corpus may be obtained, for instance, from interviews or focus group transcripts, institutional documents or observation notes, depending on methodological decisions taken in phase 2. This corpus constitutes the analysis material of stages 4 and 5.

Stage 4. Internal analysis of the narratives of peripheral voices

The objective of this stage is the isolated analysis of the textual corpus of peripheral voices. The expected result is to obtain a coding tree together with illustrative verbatim that reliably reflect the narratives of the peripheral voices.

Stage 5. Dialogical analysis of the narratives of central and peripheral voices

The objective of this stage is to put the coding trees of the central and peripheral voices into dialogue. The questions that may guide researchers in this stage are:

- a) What are the points of convergence between your narratives?
