Kingly Crafts Yung-ti Li,2022-12-20 The site of Anyang the last capital of the Shang dynasty dated to around 1200 to 1000 BCE is one of the most important sources of knowledge about craft production in Bronze Age China Excavations and research of the settlement over the past ninety years demonstrate both the advanced level of Shang craft workers and the scale and capacity of the craft industries of the time However materials unearthed in Anyang by different expeditions have since been stored separately in China and Taiwan making a thorough study of this important aspect of life in Shang China challenging Despite efforts to integrate the data based on published material the physical evidence rarely has been considered as a single group Through a systematic analysis of the archaeological materials available in both China and Taiwan Yung ti Li provides a detailed picture of craft production in Anyang and paves the way for a new understanding of how the Shang capital functioned as a metropolis Focusing on craft producing activities including bronze casting bone working shell and marble

inlay working lithic working and pottery production Kingly Crafts examines the material remains the technology and the production organization of the craft industries Although the level of Shang craftsmanship can be seen in the finished products Li demonstrates that it is necessary to study workshop remains and their archaeological context to reconstruct the social and political contexts of craft production Offering a comprehensive investigation of these remains Kingly Crafts sheds new light on the relationships between craft industries and political authority in the late Shang period

Crafting the Woman Professional in the Long Nineteenth Century Kyriaki Hadjiafxendi, Patricia Zakreski, 2016-05-13 Over the course of the nineteenth century women in Britain participated in diverse and prolific forms of artistic labour As they created objects and commodities that blurred the boundaries between domestic and fine art production they crafted subjectivities for themselves as creative workers By bringing together work by scholars of literature painting music craft and the plastic arts this collection argues that the constructed and contested nature of the female artistic professional was a notable aspect of debates about aesthetic value and the impact of industrial technologies All the essays in this volume set up a productive inter art dialogue that complicates conventional binary divisions such as amateur and professional public and private artistry and industry in order to provide a more nuanced understanding of the relationship between gender artistic labour and creativity in the period Ultimately how women faced the pragmatics of their own creative labour as they pursued vocations trades and professions in the literary marketplace and related art industries reveals the different ideological positions surrounding the transition of women from industrious amateurism to professional artistry
