of the ad hoc Committee on Air Emissions from Animal Feeding Operations of the National Research Council's Committee on Animal Nutrition. A final report is expected to be issued by the end of 2002. The interim report is intended to provide the committee's findings to date on assessment of the scientific issues involved in estimating air emissions from individual animal feeding operations: swine, beef, dairy, and poultry, as related to current animal production systems and practices in the United States. The committee's final report will include an additional assessment within eight broad categories: industry size and structure, emission measurement methodology, mitigation technology, and best management plans; short and long term research priorities; alternative approaches for estimating emissions; human health and environmental impacts; economic analyses; and other potential air emissions of concern. This interim report focuses on identifying the scientific criteria needed to ensure that estimates of air emission rates are accurate; the basis for these criteria in the scientific literature; and uncertainties associated with them. It also includes an assessment of the emission estimating approaches in a recent U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) report, Air Emissions from Animal Feeding Operations. Finally, it identifies economic criteria needed to assess emission mitigation techniques and best management practices.

Training Model for Contingency Operations Matthew L. Smith, William T. Holden, Harold M. Starry, 2002. This report documents the process and the products of a study examining training and training support for units involved in deployments for contingency operations. The purpose of this study was to assist U.S. Army leaders and training resource managers to better train units' staffs, leaders, and soldiers based on the realities and challenges of the 21st century operational environment. It was completed in support of a specific request made by the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) for assistance in providing training support to Army ground forces preparing for participating in or returning from contingency operations. The study began by surveying the existing body of knowledge concerning U.S. military contingency operations and military deployments conducted in the 1990s. The survey's purpose was to identify and codify full spectrum training and training resource requirements for units participating in contingency operations. The survey's findings were then used to develop an improved training model and associated templates and to recommend changes in current training policies and procedures. The eight principal recommendations address training strategies, training documentation, resourcing, decision making, and training management.
