

A woman is shown from the back, wearing a light-colored, thin-strapped bra and matching striped shorts. She is standing in a grassy area with a stone church and a graveyard in the background. The church has a prominent square tower with a pointed roof. The scene is set during the day with some clouds in the sky.

Motivating Clients in Therapy Richard L. Rappaport,1997-04-03 Clients who come to psychotherapy unmotivated or who become discouraged as treatment progresses pose a singular challenge to practitioners Despite the central importance of motivation for the therapeutic healing process little has been written that addresses this issue Motivating Clients in Therapy questions the widely accepted assumption of the adequately motivated client Richard Rappaport presents a four phased model of motivation that emphasizes the fear of loss of what is known and familiar as the central inhibitor to personal growth The motivation to love oneself and others must be catalyzed by an active psychotherapy relationship Rappaport offers therapists a practical and theoretical guide to increase treatment effectiveness with a wide variety of clients

Short-Term Object Relations Couples Therapy James M.

Donovan, 2013-08-21 Brief therapies have become popular indeed a necessity in today s managed care environment Perhaps because it is one of the more complex psychoanalytical models object relations theory for couples has not been adapted to a short term model until now In this volume James Donovan provides a model for short term object relations couples therapy while at the same time offering an easy to read primer on object relations that gives the practitioner a step by step model replete with examples for using object relations in practice The goal of this short term therapy is that couples emerge with an awareness of these internalized object relations and their significance This book builds on previously successful couples work by advising the therapist to focus on the core recurring impasse that threatens the couples relationship and stirs old wounds and gives detailed intervention strategies that focus on the mediation and resolution of the core fight The five step model outlines the ways to dismantle the conflict at the levels of the individual and the couple Donovan integrates aspects of other successful couples therapies into his model in order to broaden its applicability to a greater diversity of treatment situations
