The weekly readings for this unit are the chapters of Maze Runner. The chapters show the students a variety of background information and details, so they can learn to think about what would make an ideal world.

Students are challenged with non-conventional questions that are created to make the students use their own ideas, not the ideas of the author and have students physically respond to different ideas in the classroom. If you agree, raise your hand. If you disagree, lower your hand. Try not to be a member of the "majority". Then we have students ask each other questions that require them to be creative when challenging the questions. They'll be speaking to students, making through the chapters, and then we'll be asking them to write about the chapters, and then we'll be asking them to write about the chapters, and then we'll be asking them to write about the chapters.

With the study of James Dashner's novel, MAZE RUNNER, & with all the activities and the study of the novel, you should certainly enjoy it according to your interests in the study of fiction, science, reading, or life.
